"DID YOU KILL YOUR FATHER?" "I DID NOT."
Meikle boy, in answer to direct question by his attorney, firmly denies crime of which he is charged.

BOY ACTS ON STAND HIS OWN STORY OF FATHER'S SUICIDE

Meikle Lad Illustrates How According to His Testimony the Elder Meikle Shot Himself as He Entered the Door of His House—Cool Under Cross-Examination.

Edgar Weston Meikle, after facing the fierce cross-examination of District-Attorney Peters in the Salem Superior Court to-day, concluded his remarkable testimony by enacting the manner of his father's death.

Three hours he had responded to the questions of the District Attorney. Mr. Peters finally concluded and the boy was about to step from the stand when his attorney, Mr. Sisk, said:

"Edgar, do you remember how your father shot himself? Can you illustrate how he did it?"

Without a tremor the boy reached his right hand down to his right-hand trousers pocket, brought the hand up quickly, held it toward his left cheek with the thumb toward the face and the fingers in a position as though grasping the butt of a revolver

COOL AND UNSHAKEN.

As he made the movement, he said: "Was something like this? My father reached down like this. See. And the first thing I saw was the flash of the pistol. You know. And then he brought his hand up like this. See."

The boy dropped his hand and waited for his attorney, cool, collected, unshaken.

"That is all said, "Mr. Sisk and Edgar stepped from the stand and walked to the prisoner's pen.

It is expected that the jury will receive the case this afternoon about 5 o'clock. All of the evidence is in. Only the arguments of counsel and the charge of the judge occupy the rest of the day.

Meikle is called by those who followed his testimony the most remarkable witness who ever gave testimony in his own behalf in this court. He was not tangled by his questions. He showed great self-command.

ARGUMENTS TO JURY.

When he stepped from the stand a short recess was taken and his women friends crowded round him. Mrs. John W. Hutchinson handed him a letter and a lily. The letter he put in his inside pocket. The lily he put with a carnation and a fern and made a buttonhole bouquet. He was smilingly confident of the outcome.

In his argument to the jury Attorney Sisk claimed that the prosecution had failed miserably to make out a case against the boy. They had failed to establish the conditions promised by the opening address. Mr. Sisk said:

"The Commonwealth declared that they would show that the pistol with which Meikle was killed was in that bureau drawer. I defy the district attorney to point out a single particle of evidence to show that the pistol was ever kept in that upper drawer or to find a single individual who ever saw it there. The Commonwealth has failed to establish the truth of its promises in regard to evidence they would furnish.

"Prosecution Failed Utterly."

"It was a terrible story they outlined. If they had proven it, as they said they would, it would have been a severe arraignment for this boy. They failed utterly to prove it.

"Another impressive statement made by Mr. Atwill was that Edgar went to the undertaking shop where his dead father lay to examine the wound in his face

WIFE'S AVENGER SHOOTS VENDETTA VICTIM DEAD

POLICE CHASE DESPERATE MAN THROUGH THE WOODS OF PAXTON.

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, May 25.—As a result of a vendetta begun in Italy a year ago, Joseph Rainone, an Italian laborer, lies dead in this city with the top of his head blown off, while the police, in fast hacks, on motor cycles and afoot, are searching the countryside between Paxton and Leicester for Perna Michile, accused of the murder.

Revenge for a dastardly attack on Michele's young wife in the old country by Rainone is the cause of the murder, according to the story told the police by other Italians who saw the killing.

Followed Man from Italy.

After the attack Rainone fled. Leaving his bride behind in Italy Michile followed Rainone through France to Canada. In Canada he bought a gun. He followed Rainone to Worcester to Burlington, Vt., back to Worcester, and yesterday located him. To-day the vendetta came to its tragic climax in the Coes Wrench Company's place at New Worcester.

Michile's bride is avenged.

Rainone married that Michile, the fugitive, who is now in the Paxton woods, was the champion sprinter and long-distance walker of his home district. The gun he used on Rainone was found in a nearby pond. But the fugitive is probably still armed. The pursuing police look for a desperate fight if they close on their man.

Perna Michile, the accused, is twenty-five years old, a year older than Rainone, the victim. The two were brought up in the same Italian town. Sometime over a year ago Michile married a pretty coquettish of his native place. Later a child was expected.

According to the police story, on the night of May 7, last, there was a fuss at the door of Michile's home. Mrs. Michile, expecting her husband, opened the door. A man rushed in and attacked her. The assailant fled. When Michile came to his despoiled home the suffering wife whispered to him "Rainone."

Took Vendetta Oath.

But Rainone, as the story goes, had fled. Grimly Michile took the bitter oath of the vendetta, an oath that never dies while Italian blood runs hot in the veins, and the object of the vendetta is still alive.

Michile followed Rainone, ever dogging the steps of the terrified Rainone until reaching Worcester. Both men arrived here last Friday. Yesterday Rainone got a job as laborer on the new factory which the Coes Wrench Company is building at New Worcester. Within half an hour Michile had a job there. Both men worked there through the day, Rainone ever keeping an eye on the vengeful Michile.

Last night they met in Shrewsbury street. A fight followed, but the men were separated, Michile swearing he would be avenged.

Killed While Starting Work.

To-day Michile went to work. As he was putting on his overalls in a shed on the factory grounds someone called from the rear, "Rainone."

Rainone whirled, found himself looking into the muzzle of a shotgun and the next second was dead on the floor.

Then Michile was seen running toward Paxton and disappearing into the woods. Word was telephoned the police, who soon arrived on the scene and took up the chase.

McMasters on Rack in Lamoureux Trial

TRUST BOUGHT EDITORIALS

Bribe Bearing Brings Out Amazing Statements by Editor.

Under positive orders from Judge Bond not to discuss the case with anyone, and to refrain from reading the newspapers, the jury which is to decide the fate of Representative S. John Lamoureux, charged with accepting a bribe to vote against the Leased Machinery bill, to defeat which the United Shoe Machinery Company has expended many thousand dollars, has been excused until Monday morning, when the trial will be resumed in the Superior Court.

Many amazing statements were made in the closing hours of yesterday's session of court by William H. McMasters, editor of the Commonwealth, a weekly paper, who arranged the plan which resulted in the present charges against Representative Lamoureux.

Received $40 a Week.

McMasters declared that he had accepted $40 a week from the United Shoe Machinery Company for writing editorials for his paper opposing the Leased Machinery bill, and declared that Attorney Sisk demanded $1,500 for services as a legislative agent to work against the bill.

McMasters was not sure whether he had told District Attorney Moran, when he saw him about the plan to trap Lamoureux, that he was paid $40 a week by the United Shoe Machinery Company.

Here is the cross-examination of McMasters by Attorney Dennison late yesterday afternoon not published by to-day's papers:

Q.—You were interested to see the United Shoe Machinery bill killed, weren't you?
A.—Yes, sir.
Q.—Did you tell Mr. Moran that you had been paid $250 for your editorial opinion by the United Shoe Machinery Company?
A.—I am not positive, but I think I mentioned it. I think I told Mr. Moran that I got $40 a week from the United

BODY OF SLAIN MAN FOUND IN NEWTON

Evidence of a mysterious crime was discovered by Charles F. Ward, a prominent citizen of Newton Centre, to-day, when he found the body of a man lying in the woods off Beacon street. The victim had been shot three times and his skull was fractured in three different places. Money and jewelry found on his person show that the motive was not robbery. The body has not been identified.

Edgar Meikle Enacts, in Court Room, Scene of His Father's Death

Detective Blaisdell was forced to admit on the stand that the boy simply went up to the coffin and looked at his father's face without saying a word.

BOY IS COOL UNDER SHARP CROSS-FIRE BY THE PROSECUTOR

District Attorney Peters took up the cross-examination of Edgar Meikle, where he left off yesterday.

Q.—Your father had no occasion to go to those boxes did he? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know where you got the boxes? A.—No.

Q.—You used those boxes to keep toys and books in, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever tell your father about that school card? A.—No.

Q.—Well that was the card that he was looking for from your teacher, wasn't it?

Before answering Meikle asked to be shown the card. When it was handed to him he looked at it and answered yes.

Q.—Your father had every reason to expect that card from the school? A.—Yes.

Q.—You saw the writing on the card that hung on the wall? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long had it been kept there? A.—Quite awhile.

About Teacher's Letter.

Q.—You understood that the card referred to by the writing on that slate was the card you put in the box? A.—Yes.

Q.—You did not want your father to see it? A.—No.

Q.—You received a letter that morning, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who delivered that letter? A.—I think the postman did.

Q.—Did you ever testify or say that the McCarthy girl brought it to you. A.—No.

Q.—You knew that that letter signified that the teacher was trying to reach your father by some other channel than she had previously used? A.—I think I did.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that you can never forget how that letter came and the circumstance surrounding it? A.—I don't think I could.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that you will never forget how that letter came to you whenever you think of your father's death? A.—I could in time.

Q.—There has never been a moment since your father's death when you could not tell how that letter was received and who delivered it? A.—I could.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that whether it was in the middle of the night or in the day, time you could have answered that question?

Very emphatically the witness answered I could.

As Strong as He'd Put It.

Q.—Do you ever remember telling Captain Proctor that the McCarthy girl brought you that letter? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Do you remember ever telling him what time that letter was brought? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—What time was the letter brought? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Wasn't it about a quarter of 11? A.—I don't think so.

Q.—Is that the way you want to leave it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is that as strong as you want to put it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you any explanation why you can't remember the exact time that the letter received from the postman and how long after that you went into Mrs. McCarthy's to get that key? A.—Only that I can't remember.

Q.—You got the letter before you went for the key? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you read it? A.—Yes.

Q.—But you can't recall the time that you received it? A.—No.

Q.—It was after you received that letter? A.—I believe so.

Q.—Did you show her the letter? A.—I don't remember.

Failed to Remember.

Q.—Did you say that your father would give it to you for opening his letter? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did you take the history book from the bureau drawer? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now going back to Mrs. McCarthy's, did Mrs. McCarthy say to you when you asked for the key that you had better wait until your father came home? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did she not say that it was near noontime and your father would be home very soon? A.—I do not remember.

Q.—Did you intend to go to school that forenoon? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you not get the key to that drawer to get something else besides the history book? It was pretty late in the day, wasn't it, to make up your mind to go to school that forenoon? A.—No, I don't know.

Q.—Why didn't you go? A.—I changed my mind.

Q.—When did you change your mind? A.—Sometime during the forenoon.

Q.—Was it before you took the book out of that drawer? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Was it before you took the book out of that drawer? A.—I don't remember.

"Holding up the blue pasteboard box that the pistol came in, the District Attorney asked:

"Did you see this blue box in that bureau drawer?"

Edgar answered slowly the one word, "No."

Q.—Did you tell anybody you saw this blue box in the bureau drawer? A.—I don't remember.

Answered Voluntarily.

Q.—Did you not testify at the inquest that you saw this blue box in the bureau drawer? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—How is it that you can't remember so many of these essential matters when, on trivial matters, your memory is so good?

Before Mr. Sisk's objection got in the boy answered: "There were so many questions at the inquest and so many from the officers to me that I can't remember all the answers I gave.

Q.—Did you answer those questions at the inquest voluntarily? A.—Yes.

Q.—There was no forcing of answers from you, was there? A.—No.

Q.—And there was no attempt to force answers from you either, was there? A.—No.

Q.—You were questioned at the inquest just as you are being questioned here now with plenty of time given you to think and plenty of time given to answer? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now again did you not swear at that inquest that you saw this blue box (dramatically holding the box up in front of the boy) in the bureau drawer? A.—I don't remember saying so; I don't remember what I did say.

Q.—Is that the way you want to leave it? A.—Yes.

Forgot Some Incidents.

Q.—Let me read what you said at the inquest: "I saw some boxes in the bureau drawer and some trinkets; yes I saw that blue box there, too." That Mr. Meikle was what you testified to at the inquest. Again I ask you did you testify to that or did you not?

"I don't remember," the boy said, gazing solemnly at the District Attorney.

Q.—This inquest was held almost to a day a year ago was it not? A.—I think so, that.

Q.—And incidents connected with the death of your father were fresher in your mind then than they are now, were they not? A.—Well, the time was earlier.

Q.—But the incidents were fresher in your mind then than now? A.—Well, I don't remember everything that occurred at the inquest.

Q.—Is it that the way you want to leave that? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, you put that letter from the teacher in that large box, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—You didn't go to that box after your father's death, did you? A.—No.

Q.—Then everything you put in that box you put there before your father's death? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you tell Captain Proctor that you put those things in that box? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Don't you say at the inquest that you put those things in that box? A.—I don't remember.

Didn't Lower Curtain.

Q.—Did you pull down the curtain in the kitchen back of the stove? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did you tell Captain Proctor or any other officer that you pulled down the curtains in the kitchen before the shot? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did you say at the inquest that you pulled down that curtain? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Now, as a matter of fact, did you pull down the curtain? A.—No.

The answer was quick, clear and loud, and made an impression upon the crowded court room, so that the court officers cast warning glances about the room.

Q.—Didn't you swear at the inquest that you were sitting by that window during the forenoon reading the Youths' Companion? A.—I said something about the Youths' Companion, but I don't remember that I said that I was reading it sitting by the window.

Q.—Well, were you sitting by the window? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Was it ever your custom to sit by the window and read? A.—I might have, but I don't remember.

Friendly With Gaudreau.

Q.—Have you had any trouble with the Gaudreau family? A.—No.

Q.—You stole a flight at the Gaudreau house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell the Gaudreaus how your father met his death? A.—No.

Q.—Did you not tell them that your father came in, washed his hands and went into the front room? A.—No.

Q.—Did Sarah Mrs. Sheehan if Captain Proctor had inquired from her if she could look into your kitchen window. A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you do that? A.—I don't know. I simply went and asked her.

Q.—So long as you knew, why should you care what conclusion they should arrived at? A.—I didn't care.

Q.—Then why did you ask her? A.—Well I had read in the papers about Dr. Pinkham, who had noticed something about the window, and just as I went to see Mrs. Sheehan that day I asked her.

"Shot With Right Hand."

Q.—When you saw your father's body in the undertaker's shop did you have to bend your head over to see the wound? A.—No.

Q.—Did you notice the wound particularly? A.—Mr. Blaisdell said to it with his finger.

Here District-Attorney Peters drew out copy of testimony given by Edgar at the inquest on his father's death. There the boy testified that his father reached into his right hand pocket, drew the revolver and shot himself.

In answer to questions the boy said that his father reached for the weapon with his right hand, drew the revolver and shot himself.

In answer to the direct question the boy said that his father used his right hand, that he did not change the revolver to his left hand and he did not see his father use his left hand at all.

It is the contention of the prosecution that the wound could not have been inflicted by Mr. Meikle using his right hand. During the testimony for the defence Mr. Sisk drew out the fact that Mr. Meikle at his work sometimes used his left hand.

After he had finished reading the questions the district attorney said to the boy that I was reaching for a pan of chops.

District-Attorney Peters ended the cross-examination at this point, Mr. Sisk rose and, addressing himself to the boy, said:

"Edgar, do you remember how your father shot himself? Can you illustrate how he did it?"

Edgar reached his right hand down to his right-hand trousers pocket, brought his hand up quickly, held and pointed his left-hand clenched fist with the thumb toward the ceiling and the fingers in a position as though grasping the butt of a revolver. Then he said: "He put it—it was something like this. My father put it—it was like this. See, the first thing I saw was the flash of the pistol and then I saw my father brought his hands up like this. See."

"That is all," said Mr. Sisk, and the boy stepped down from the stand, walked erect and firmly across the court room, stepped into the pen and sat down.

How the Trust Bought Editorial Opinion

Q.—How much money did you receive from the United Shoe Machinery Company for editorial expressions? A.—$350.

Q.—From whom? A.—Major O'Keefe, the advertising agent of the company.

Q.—Did you have a contract? A.—No.

Q.—How were you paid? A.—There was an amicable arrangement. I was to write editorials. If the company liked them, Major O'Keefe said the company was willing to pay for them as long as they were satisfactory.

Q.—At what rate were you paid? A.—Forty dollars a week.

Q.—This money was all for editorial work, was it? You were selling your editorial opinion for money? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember those questions and answers that I have just read you from a copy of the testimony given at the inquest in Lynn?

The boy answered: "I remember telling a story of how my father shot himself."

Q.—Do you remember questions and answers in substance? A.—I don't remember exactly; I remember some of them.

Q.—Do you remember telling Captain Proctor that your father used his right hand? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Do you remember telling Captain Proctor that your father used his right hand and reached into his right hand pocket? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did you tell anyone that you were reaching for a pan of chops? A.—I don't remember exactly. I was reaching for something on the stove, something like that. I might have said

ATTORNEY SISK'S ARGUMENT TO JURY

Lawyer Sisk in his argument to the jury said:

"I want to call attention to the statement of Assistant District Attorney Atwill, who in his opening to the jury said that the boy ran over to or took to Mrs. McCarthy's house and that he grabbed the key with which to open the bureau drawer. That was one of the most serious things that was said in the opening address. It was terrible in its significance. The whole case of the Commonwealth centered on the key, the bureau drawer and the cartridge box. Was Mr. Atwill's statement true?

"I call attention to Mrs. McCarthy's own sworn testimony on that point. She declared that she gave the boy the permission to take that key. There was no grabbing and rushing away as was indicated in the opening.

"No Grabbing of Key."

"McCarthy, when he took the stand declared that he had charged Edgar with taking the key without his wife's permission. That was not true and McCarthy must have known that it was not true because his wife had told him all about it.

"The government claimed in its opening that it would present you a series of events showing hatred on the part of the boy towards his father. But all the government has presented has been the evidence of a whipping given the boy by his father ten months before the murderer's death. The father and son lived together in peace and happiness. The father and boy slept together in the same bed every Monday night before the father's death.

"The government failed to show that there was any angry feelings between them which would result in the boy contemplating the crime of murder, and, if the boy did contemplate murder, sleeping with his father the night before, as he did, the night time would have been the time for such a horrible thing.

About Mr. McCarthy.

"I will take up with you, in order, the testimony given by the witness Mrs. Jeremiah McCarthy, who was sitting in his window at 12 o'clock when Edgar rushed out shouting 'Jerry, Jerry, my father has shot himself.' And then, first of all, I want to say something about Mr. McCarthy, of the character of the man.

Mrs. McCarthy testified that a reasonable, normal sort of man, and if they had been eliminated from this case, the case would never have reached the court, you would not be here and this boy would not be in the dock, charged with a horrible crime.

"Mr. McCarthy takes pride in his firmness. It is a firmness not creditable to any man. He says he forms an opinion right away and no evidence could swerve him into changing that opinion. His testimony should be viewed in the light of the man's character, a man erratic, excitable and irritable.

"McCarthy Contradicted."

"He should have been more charitable with Edgar Meikle. He had known Edgar for some time. The boy was three years old, a bright, handsome lad, against whom the only thing brought out in this court, except the charge of murder made against him, is that he played truant from school and once stole three pints of milk. And this last he frankly admitted.

"Mr. McCarthy has been flatly contradicted by the testimony of his wife, Mrs. McCarthy, a well-mannered, sincere woman, tells you that Edgar was nervous after the shooting, that he trembled and cried. Inspector Burckes tells you the same.

"In the matter of the window curtain McCarthy is flatly contradicted by Officer Lee. McCarthy says the kitchen curtains were all down, that the room was dark and he emphasized the fact that the room was dreary. Officer Lee tells you that one of the curtains was partially raised that it being monday, there was plenty of light in the kitchen.

"McCarthy tells you that the room was filled with smoke from the revolver shot. Captain Proctor, an expert on revolvers, tells you that the smoke from one pistol shot would not become a room, but McCarthy seeks to contradict Captain Proctor.

"Given to Exaggeration."

"The trouble with McCarthy is that he is given to exaggeration. He magnifies everything. He would have you believe that the room was darkened and the curtain drawn. Nothing of the kind was so. McCarthy's testimony should not be considered as the testimony of a reasonable, sane man, and that is McCarthy.

A thorough search of the house was made at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of November 7, the day of the shooting. That search was a search for money, not a search for crime. Everything was pawed over by the police. What earthly significance is it where that history book was found? What earthly significance is it where that letter was found? What earthly significance is it where that department card was found?

"Your Little Venture."

Q.—You knew that if your little venture went through it would create a great sensation, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—You knew it would be a great advertising venture for the Commonwealth, didn't you?

Judge Bond—"You mean his paper, don't you?" He bent forward, addressing the words to Mr. Dennison. There was an outburst of laughter. The court officers rapped for order. The only sober face was that of the judge.

"You mean the paper, don't you?" repeated Mr. Dennison to the witness. "Yes," replied Editor McMasters.

Q.—Where did you get your material for editorials? A.—From the newspapers, from Major O'Keefe, advertising agent for the company, and from a labor union man named Donovan of Brockton.

Q.—Didn't you know that when the public became aware that corruptionists were at work in the Legislature that that would have a bad effect on the pending legislation? A.—I did.

Q.—Although you were paid $40 a week by the United Shoe Machinery Company for writing editorials favorable to its interests, you mean to say you were not employed in what the fate of the bill was? A.—I wanted it to pass. I was not "tricked" by legitimate means, but no other.

Introduced O'Shea.

Q.—What did you do about getting your friend O'Shea a position as legislative agent for the United Shoe Machinery Company? A.—I put the matter up to Major O'Keefe. I gave O'Shea a letter of introduction to Major O'Keefe, explaining that he (O'Shea) was a friend of mine, and was desirous of securing the position of legislative agent for the United Shoe Machinery Company.

Q.—How much did O'Shea expect to get for this work? A.—He wanted $1,500.

Q.—Isn't it a fact, McMasters, that Mr. O'Shea told you that he wanted $50 a day for twenty days and $25 a day for the same period for expenses. A.—Yes, he told me that. He figured it up in a book, and said the total would be $1,500.

Q.—What did he want $25 a day for expenses for? A.—I don't know. He didn't tell me, but I remember at the time I asked him if he was going to buy a house.

This was the climax of a series of questions and an unusual stillness prevailed.

Mr. Dennison then took another tack and asked Mr. McMasters about Representative Lamoureux's visit to his office on Monday.

Q.—What did you tell O'Shea concerning the United Shoe Machinery Company? A.—I told him that things were all right.

Q.—Had you talked with any one since you had last seen O'Shea? A.—I had talked with President Winslow.

Q.—And things were not all right? A.—That's right.

Thought Lie Justified.

Q.—Then why did you lie to your friend O'Shea? A.—I considered that the exigencies of the situation demanded it.

Q.—Now, McMasters, did you tell Lamoureux and O'Shea that there were two police inspectors listening to the conversation?

Q.—When did you tell your friend O'Shea that you had got the inspectors to their hiding places? A.—Not till we were in the room in Grand Jury rooms.

Referring to the police inspectors who hid in a closet in McMasters' room and heard an alleged conversation between McMasters and Lamoureux, Mr. Dennison asked: You had a rehearsal with the police? A.—Yes.

Q.—Tell us how you staged it. A.—Thursday about 2 o'clock Armstrong went into the closet and Lee and I talked. Then Lee went into the closet and Armstrong and I talked.

Duke of Abruzzi, Noted Explorer, Pays Third Visit to America.

MADE DASH FOR THE POLE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Duke of Abruzzi, Prince of Savoy, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, explorer, sportsman, hero of innumerable exciting episodes and the most adventurous spirit among the royal families of Europe, is a visitor to the city of New York.

His Italian compatriots were given an opportunity to welcome him to-day when the Italian cruiser Varese dropped anchor off Seventieth street, in the Hudson River, where she joined the international war squadron, alongside the two French cruisers, Chanzy-Lalonde and Victor Hugo.

Popular in America.

The visit of the Duke is one of the most important, so far as the high rank and international fame of the distinguished guest is concerned, since Prince Louis of Orleans came to this country. The present guest of the city is one of the most interesting young men in Europe, and on previous visits to America have won for him a warm place in the hearts of Americans. His democratic tendencies, his courage and enterprise and the energy with which he has carried to successful achievement the difficulties he has set for himself, have made him liked by Americans.

The Duke is thirty-four years old, tall and slender, with dark gray eyes, smooth face and a firm, determined jaw. He was born in Madrid, June 29, 1873. He is a lieutenant of the royal navy of Italy.

Explored the Arctic.

His greatest feat was his journey of discovery in the Polar Sea, when he set out to reach the North Pole. He went nineteen miles farther north than Dr. Nansen, and his vessel was frozen fast for eleven months. Three of the members of his party perished, and the Duke himself had three fingers frozen off, showing that he did not shirk any of the hardships which his men were compelled to undergo.

In 1898 he made a trip to explore the gold-bearing streams of Alaska in a schooner, the Lady Jane Grey. The expedition was ill-fated and the schooner went to the bottom with thirty-six men.

During his Alaskan exploration the Duke was the first man to reach the summit of Mount Saint Elias. He has been a famous mountain climber, and discovered a large part of darkest Africa, locating the Ruwenzori mountains and discovering a river of which the geographists had no knowledge. While on a polar expedition he ascertained the true location of Cape Fligely and the non-existence of King Oscar's Island.

Given Cullum Medal.

The Duke's first trip to the United States was made in 1899, when he visited in 1903 and was decorated by the American Geographical Society with the Cullum gold medal.

$800,000,000 FOR WARSHIPS.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 25.—A special conference of the highest functionaries of the navy department has recommended adoption of a constructional program involving the expenditure of $800,000,000.

ORCHARD'S TALE NOW KNOWN TO THE DEFENCE

Discovery by Haywood Counsel Staggering Blow to State.

MAY CALL THIRD PANEL

BOISE, Idaho, May 25.—Orchard's complete confession is at last in possession of the defence in the Haywood murder trial. This is regarded as the worst blow yet sustained by the State in the prosecution of Moyer, Haywood, Pettibone and Simpkins. The State had planned to have the defence absolutely in ignorance of what Orchard would say, in order that they would be unable to produce witnesses in contradiction.

How the leak occurred is unknown, but the jubilant attitude of Richardson and Darrow indicates that they believe they have penetrated the State's scheme. It is just becoming known that the reason the defence fought so hard to get the State to file a bill of particulars was on account of the Orchard affair. Orchard had confessing, a year ago, made public a synopsis of Orchard's alleged confession.

Deceived Friends of Accused.

This appears to have deceived the friends of the accused and started them on the wrong track. Asked if the story Orchard will tell on the stand will be along the lines previously indicated, McPartland said: "No. Orchard will tell a true story of the dastardly murder."

Borah and Hawley declined to discuss the matter. When the latter was asked if the defence had Orchard's story he said he did not think so. However, a lawyer for the defence declared that he not only had a complete confession, but had conclusive proof to prove that many of Orchard's statements were manufactured from whole cloth.

Defence Jubilant.

Attorneys for the defence were jubilant, when court convened to-day, over two decided victories scored yesterday. Darrow gained one. Incidentally here the prosecution entered its first exception to the judge's ruling.

Richardson won another point when after several minutes' skirmishing by referring to Roosevelt's "undesirable citizens," speech he eliminated from the box Tetter, who, although declaring absolute prejudice against the miners' federation, seemed determined to qualify.

As soon as court reopened to-day, the examination of Finley Morrison, who has been accepted by one side, was resumed. McBean, a rail Scotch character, convulsed the court and audience by declaring when interrogated with respect to the effect newspaper stories had on him: "Well, the more I read, the less I know."

Means Third Panel.

At the opening to-day the defence had four and the prosecution three peremptory challenges remaining. Rumor has it that Daniel Clark, George Hunt and John Whitlock and Lee Scrivener, who were unwisely qualified, are to be ousted on peremptory challenges. With only twenty-six veniremen left, this means a third panel must be summoned.

Darrow said: "It is impossible to complete the jury from the panel remaining. Another adjournment cannot be avoided. If seven extend that there. More residents are drafted, they are all bankers or prominent business men. We have 2,000 trades unionists in Boise, only one of whom has been called."

BOSTON EXPRESS IN COLLISION IN FOG

AUGUSTA, Me., May 25.—The Boston-St. John express was in collision with the rear end of a westbound freight train half a mile East of Gardiner early to-day. Conductor Donnelly of the freight sustained a fracture of the left leg. A car loaded with paper was wrecked. A heavy fog prevented the engineer of the passenger seeing the freight.

SWAMPSCOTT MAN HELD; FRAUD CHARGE

Joseph H. Symonds, forty-five years old, has been arrested at his home in Swampscott on an indictment warrant from Baltimore charging him with obtaining money under false pretences, and brought to Boston.

The warrant charges him with obtaining $450 on December 15, 1906, from Louis S. Wilson, and on January 19 of this year $250 from Louis E. Williams, $250 from Sarah A. Shoeman and $55 from Fannie E. Bailey, all of Baltimore.

SHACKLED LUNATIC LEAPS FROM TRAIN

MONCTON, N. B., May 25.—Fearing that unless he is soon caught he will harm persons in the vicinity, officers are hesting the woods near here in search of a French Canadian lunatic who escaped from his guards while being transported from Bathurst to the Provincial Hospital at St. John. Although handcuffed, and the train running at a speed estimated at forty miles an hour, the insane man plunged headlong through one of the car windows.

MRS. M'KINLEY IN HER CANTO NHOME

MRS. M'KINLEY HAS RELAPSE; END IS NEAR

Drugs Alone Keeping Her Alive and Physicians Say She May Die at Any Moment.

CANTON, O., May 25.—Mrs. McKinley was worse to-day. Her heart had become weaker during the night and its action was again irregular. It was a change that seemed to forecast the end of the long battle to preserve her life. Dr. Portmann's voice broke when he left the McKinley home. Relatives were told that while she might live through Sunday the end could be expected at almost any time.

All yesterday Mrs. McKinley had improved. Her heart was stronger and more regular, and early in the evening she relished enough to swallow a few teaspoonsful of beef tea. It was the first nourishment she had taken in three days. Her condition was then such that her physicians were certain that she would live for several days, and thought it likely that her life might be preserved for a month.

There was even a slender chance that she might live through the Summer. Frequent doses of strychnine are alone keeping her alive to-day. There is a possibility that she may rally, but a continued sinking is looked for. Even her sister, who has held the belief that Mrs. McKinley might recover, has given up all hope.

MORAN FIGHTS PARDON MOVE

District Attorney Moran will not countenance a pardon for Robert C. Proctor, the former private secretary of United States Senator Lodge, who stands convicted of stealing $225 campaign contribution given by John G. Bostgen, to the Republican State committee.

A pardon has been suggested in some quarters, but Mr. Moran declares that he will bring Proctor back to this State, no matter where he is found.

The period of grace will expire Monday, and bail or fine be declared forfeited if he is still among the missing, but Mr. Moran will send a police inspector a commission to find him and bring him back, no matter what the cost.

WARBLER FROM FISH WHARF GETS "HOOK"

Proof of the fact that he hailed from historic Fish Wharf, one Judd Smith faced a big audience at the Columbia last night in the amateur bill, thinking that his style of warbling would land him a winner. But the natural inference was that he was a good lumination of how a fish sings, and so natural was that initation that in less than a jiffy he was "hooked," as any live fish ought to be.

The winners were Joseph Roberts, an acrobat, and Eddie McFadden, a dancer. Only one young woman appeared.

'MAYOR' CALLS IN RYAN TO KILL RECOUNT BILL

Made Desperate by Prospect of Early Passage, McClellan Seeks Trust Aid.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Alarmed by the prospects of the early passage of the recount bill by the Senate, "Mayor" McClellan yesterday summoned William F. Sheehan, legal adviser of Ryan, Belmont and "Tom" Brady, to his office, to plan a campaign to defeat the bill when it comes to a vote next week.

It was a sad group of men that entered the private office of the "Mayor" early in the afternoon and, after the conference had continued for two hours, the "Mayor" and those with him left the office through the back door and walked from City Hall through the rear entrance.

Senator McCarren, who has assumed the "Mayor" since the opening of the session that the recount bill would never come to a vote in the upper branch of the Legislature, was the first to arrive. He was followed by Senators Mcgill and owens, who are to the confidence of the "Mayor," and Assemblyman Cuvillier. John H. Delmen, chief political adviser of the "Mayor," was also present.

Mayor" McClellan was irritable and angry, and consequently McCarren spoke sharply as to why arrangements had not been perfected to kill the bill. McCarren pleaded that everything had been arranged, but was upset Thursday when Governor Hughes sent in an emergency message demanding the passage of the bill, and threatening to keep the Legislature in session until the bill became a law.

McCarren insisted it was still possible to sidetrack the bill, and, on his advice William F. Sheehan, the companion of Brady and Ryan, and their counsel in tection and gas matters, was sent for.

After a long discussion the "Mayor" and Sheehan escaped from the building through the entrance to the Bureau of Weights and Measures, under the main stairway in the rotunda, and the others followed soon after by the same door. The conference was continued at the "Mayor's" home in Washington square last night.

CHALLENGES JUDGE TO VISIT MRS. EDDY

STREETER INVITES CHANDLER ALSO TO TALK WITH SCIENTIST LEADER.

CONCORD, N. H., May 25.—Throwing down the gauntlet to counsel for the "next friends," General Frank S. Streeter, senior counsel for the Eddy trustees, yesterday afternoon, sprung a sensation which overlapped the events of a day abounding in exciting incidents, by inviting Judge Chamberlain, before whom the preliminary hearing is being held, and Senator William E. Chandler, senior counsel for the "next friends," to visit Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy at her home at Pleasant View, to have a personal talk with the aged leader of the Christian Science faith over whose personal affairs the present suit is being waged. This invitation came near the close of the day's proceedings, when General Streeter, after arguing that Judge Chamberlain had the right to order the substitution of the trustees, and the judge having asked how he could do so without the case being heard on its merits, General Streeter told the judge that he could decide the matter by seeing and talking with Mrs. Eddy.

General Streeter's voice showed that he was very deeply stirred. His invitation was extended after he had said, in answering the charge that the trustees were in contempt in accepting the trust after the suit had been filed, on March 5, that too defendants in New Hampshire had not been served with the papers until the 9th of that month, and the Massachusetts defendants not until the 12th, and had told the judge that he could substitute the trustees as complainants if he had been convinced that the deed of trust was Mrs. Eddy's own competent act.

Asks Court to Visit Mrs. Eddy.

General Streeter said: "I ask this Court to go and sit down with Mrs. Eddy and talk with her. My learned friend from Washington and ex-Senator Chandler may go with you. I ask Your Honor to go with me, and I invite ex-Senator Chandler also to go with me and talk this out with Mrs. Eddy and get her brother Dan's or her dead, and satisfy yourself whether this is her deed and whether the letter she wrote to you is her letter."

The judge did not accept the invitation, and Mr. Chandler made no direct reply.

Secondary among the sensations which came thick and fast during the proceedings, and, as a result of considerable feeling exhibited by the opposing counsel, which at times resulted in impassioned outbursts of oratory, was the passing of the lie to former Senator Chandler by the General Streeter. This incident also occurred during the latter part of the afternoon, when former Senator Chandler was making his argument in support of his contention that the trustees should not be substituted for the next friends. Mr. Chandler had said that although George W. Glover, Mrs. Eddy's son, had been sent from home when he was young and helpless and had no education, as the term is generally understood, he still had a certain moral ability, which the senator admired, and, he added, that he thought his grade of intelligence was of a higher order than that of either Gen. Streeter or Gen. Henry M. Baker. "I wish George Glover were here in this court room to listen to these proceedings," said Senator Chandler.

Passes Lie to Chandler.

"Why isn't he here," asked General Streeter.

"Because we haven't the money to get him here," replied Mr. Chandler.

"You have," said General Streeter.

Senator Chandler glared at General Streeter and said: "I can take the lie from General Streeter. I have taken it from an even more eminent source," referring to his experience with President Roosevelt.

After the adjournment of court John W. Kelley, one of ex-Senator Chandler's assistants, went to General Streeter and wanted him to apologize to ex-Senator Chandler. The apology had not been forthcoming up to this morning.

Mr. Chandler subjected the three trustees to a severe cross-examination, asking for the property of Mrs. Eddy to the different kinds of arraignment. He declared that the creation of a deed of trust after the bill of equity had been filed by the "next friends" was contempt of court, and that they should have been punished for such a step.

WHITNEY 'JUST IN TIME,' SAYS THE MAYOR NOW

Mayor Fitzgerald, who two weeks ago was of the opinion that Henry M. Whitney had started his gubernatorial campaign too soon, has now changed his mind, according to to-day's issue of the municipal weekly, The Boston Guide. His Honor says:

"There are some people who think that Mr. Whitney is starting his campaign too soon, but we ogbie, I'm inclined to think the line that he initiated on Wednesday night, in which he said he would announce how he will have talked practical business sense to thousands of men in Massachusetts and this sort of work is bound to be helpful to him in his campaign."

The Mayor, undoubtedly, has come to the decision that he cannot talk about anything concerning politics too soon since he announced last Saturday that he had already opened his campaign for renomination for the Mayoralty, which comes two months later than the political calendar than the State convention.

'BREAKERS' AND STRIKERS RIOT IN BROOKLYN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 25.—In a riot between longshoremen strikers and strikebreakers at Sackett and Columbia streets, Brooklyn, to-day, many shots were fired, several persons were injured, windows were broken and the police reserves from two stations, after inflicting numerous scalp wounds with their clubs, arrested four of the strike-breakers. Three hundred colored strike-breakers had worked all night on the pier of the Fabre line, at the foot of Sackett street, and they were leaving their work when the trouble occurred.

Children are said to have started the trouble to-day by throwing stones at the strike-breakers. One negro, who had been struck, pursued the child who had hurled the stone, and that precipitated the rioting. A dozen men caught this negro and were beating him when the full army of strike-breakers attacked the strikers. Stones, bricks, clubs, sticks and other missiles were thrown. Those that missed a human head went through a show window. In the midst of the rioting several negroes drew revolvers and commenced to shoot.

GRIEF FOR WIFE MAKES MAN DEAF DUMB AND BLIND

Young Woman's Disappearance Has Remarkable Effect on Her Husband.

SIGHT IS NOW RESTORED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The intense grief over the disappearance of his young wife, which caused Robert Baker to become deaf, dumb and for a time blind, has attracted wide attention from physicians. They declare it one of the most marked examples of the effect of deep sorrow upon the human mind they have ever known. It is now learned that Mr. Baker will become a maniac if his wife is not found soon.

She disappeared last Friday. Mr. Baker spent all that night in a vain search for her. He visited more than twenty hospitals. He walked the streets until he was ready to drop from exhaustion. When he returned to his home, at No. 52 Montauk avenue, East New York, he fell in a convulsion. It was when it had ended that sight, speech and hearing were gone. On Sunday he had a second convulsion. Then it was that his sight was restored.

His reason remained, though his family physician said yesterday that his nervous tension was so great that he broke might yield at any minute. All day yesterday he sat in his room, thinking of his lost wife. Before him was a pad and pencil. To each caller he handed the pencil and queried: "Have you heard anything of my wife?"

The stricken look on his face would change to one of utter despair when the visitor would shake his head. Even the presence of his three-year-old daughter does not cheer him.

MAN'S USEFULNESS IS PAST AT 35, SAYS VOGT

CLEVELAND, O., May 25.—C. A. Vogt, auditor of the American Steel & Wire Company, has become a rival of Dr. Osler. The latter would have a man cash in at forty. Vogt would have him count his stock at thirty-five. "There aren't any jobs waiting for men after they have gone half-way through their thirties," Vogt said. "Big business firms don't want men over that age."

TESTIFIES TO $6000 ROBBERY IN BOSTON

AUGUSTA, Me., May 25.—The first meeting of the creditors in the bankruptcy proceedings of Oscar E. Penney, the Augusta stable keeper who a few weeks ago reported to the Boston police that he and other men had been robbed of $6,000, was held yesterday. Mr. Penney was closely questioned regarding mortgages held by his brother in Waterville, aggregating $4500, on property now in his name. All of these, he said, was lost in Boston. The examiners reported his assets to be $12,000.

GIRL TO WED MAN WHO SHOT FATHER DEAD

Acquitted on Ground of Self-Defence, Man Takes Out Marriage License.

FREED OVER WEEK AGO

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 25.—But one week free from the charge of murder, Antonio Ricca has taken out a marriage license to wed the daughter of the man whom he has been adjudged to killed in self-defence. The quarrel which led to the death of Todisco was over the attentions which Ricca was paying to the girl, Bettina, and throughout the trial of her lover the young woman was in court.

A week ago yesterday afternoon Ricca's personal liberty was in extreme jeopardy as he stood before a jury which had heard evidence upon which the panel was to adjudge him guilty or not guilty of the murder of Luigi Todisco. He had been on trial for nearly a week, and at his side had sat the little woman whom he intended to marry and for love of whom he had braved the anger of her father, Luigi Todisco.

The jury had been out less than an hour before returning a verdict of "not guilty."

Antonio Ricca was arrested on December 1, 1906, for the alleged murder that day of Luigi Todisco in Todisco's home. He had for some time been paying attention to Bettina, Luigi's daughter, but his advances were frowned upon by Todisco, who had commanded the young man to keep away from the house. On the night before the tragedy Todisco is said to have unexpectedly arrived home and found Antonio there. Without ceremony he is said to have kicked the lover out of the door and to have promised dire punishment if he again ventured to darken the threshold.

The next day Ricca was walking down Atwell's avenue when the old man espied him and crossed to that side of the street.

Apparently there was no enmity between them when they met, by bystanders asserted, but they had not walked far before Todisco made a pass at Ricca, who either fell or was pushed off the curbstone. As Ricca was about to run away Todisco closed with him and the two went down. While they were struggling there came the report of a pistol shot, and Ricca, getting up, ran away. Todisco made no effort to rise, for he had been shot and fatally injured, death ensuing soon after he was admitted to the Rhode Island Hospital.

KUROKI LEAVES, CALLING BOSTON GREATEST CITY

Japanese Hero Thanks Bostonians Through American for Royal Welcome.

CROWDS SEE BARON OFF

General Tamemato Kuroki, Japan's distinguished warrior, wound up his three days visit to Boston to-day, and in bidding farewell to what he termed the greatest city he has yet visited in his tour of the United States, the Baron through the columns of the BOSTON AMERICAN wished to thank Bostonians for the royal welcome he had received and the hospitality displayed on every side.

There was a crowd of several hundred persons gathered about the entrance of the Touraine when the little sun-browned Japanese and the imperial party left the hotel to board carriages for the South Station.

Pats Policeman on Back.

As Kuroki was about to enter his carriage as the Touraine he stopped for a moment, turned around and cordially thrust out his hand to Patrolman Dewey of the Lagrange street station, who with the big bluecoat quickly grasped the gutted the officer kindly on the back, and through his secretary said: "You are a dutiful and courageous gentleman. You and your uniform please me much." The compliment was particularly gratifying to Officer Dewey and his associates, as they had come in for much criticism for poor arrangements on the night of the general's arrival.

Amid cheers and "Banzais," to which the general gracefully responded by doffing his silk hat, the party boarded carriages for the station. By a coincidence the train which is to bear them to Niagara and later to Chicago was made up on track thirteen. "General Kuroki is not superstitious," said one of the imperial party. "We do not mind a little thing like that."

"Farewell, Beautiful Boston."

At the station, while there was quite a crowd gathered to witness the departure, only a few of the Japanese students from Harvard and some of the more influential of the local Japanese residents were admitted inside the gate. There was a farewell reception on the observation platform of the train, and as the "All aboard" was shouted the general removed his hat, bowed to the crowd and said in Japanese: "Farewell, beautiful city."

On the train, while on the way to the Trinity Place station, the general consented to pose for the BOSTON AMERICAN artist and he expressed delight at the opportunity which was offered to express his impressions of the visit. The following is the extensive interview given through his secretary:

Stay Was Too Short.

"I desire to express my heartiest and most profound thanks for the manner in which I have been entertained during my only brief stay in the city of Boston. I have enjoyed Boston more than any city I have visited as yet. I realize that I am a young man no longer, and I feel sad at the thought of perhaps never being in this beautiful city again.

"I consider the park system of Boston the nearest to perfection of any I have ever seen. I shall always recall with pleasure my visit to the Oliver Wendell Holes School as I am very fond of children.

"I wish that I might have stayed longer on the Art Museum, for I would have loved to have seen more of those Japanese relics. Let me add again to the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that I am extremely grateful for the hospitality shown and I shall always regard it as the best one of the happiest periods of my life."

TRINITY TIME ORDINATIONS AT BRIGHTON

The Trinity time ordinations for the archdiocese of Boston took place at St. John's Ecclesiastical Seminary in Brighton today, beginning at 8 a. m. Right Rev. John Brady, auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese, officiating as the ordaining prelate. He was assisted by the clergy of the seminary faculty and students of the seminary in the several minor offices of the ordination mass.

The ordinations of the Catholic Church take place annually, the last ordinations of the week preceding Christmas and Trinity Sunday, the week preceding the first Sunday in Christmas time, so that to-day the office of subdeacontate and minor orders were conferred.

30 Candidates for Minor Orders.

Minor orders was the first office conferred. There were thirty candidates for this office. They arranged themselves in a half circle before the altar, and to each one of the young men the Bishop gave the candlestick and other religious articles symbolic of the office to which they were elevated.

Next two subdeaconates were conferred. The mass was then continued to its conclusion. The officers of the mass were: Celebrant and ordaining prelate, Right Rev. John Brady, assisting priests, Very Rev. Grannis Harvey, S. S., president of the seminary, and Rev. Bernard Hopkins, rector; Father O'Connell of Dorchester and Matthew Judge of Hartford, Ct., subdeacons; Thomas O'Connor of Fayetteville, R. I., crozier bearer, Jerome Herlihy of Roxbury, book bearer, John Reardon of Providence and James Fitzsimmons of Dorchester, candle bearers. Rev. Joseph Shaughnessy of Brighton and Patrick Wards of Newton, chanters. William Clark of South Boston and Henry Ryan of Dorchester, director of choir. Rev. J. Brosnan, S. S., organist, Joseph C. Walsh of South Boston.

Students Ordained To-day.

The following students were ordained:

To subdeaconship, Edward J. Hackett of Medford and Patrick J. Sullivan of Uxbridge.

To minor orders, Joseph A. Bardon of Chelsea, James H. Downey of Plymouth, and S. Millard of Salem. Fred F. Muldoon of Brighton, Martin C. Keating of Dorchester, Cr. Joga M. Ahearn of Portland, Me., Michael E. Dooley of Marlboro, John J. Fletcher of Charlestown, William J. Foley of East Boston, David J. Hanlon of Cambridge, Paul F. Keating of Manchester, N. Maguinness of Charlestown, William F. Devaney of Newton, Joseph H. Filion of Lowell, Robert F. Lee of South Boston, Gaspar Parrik of Hartford, Ct., Joseph J. Trainor of Providence, R. I.

The spiritual retreat of the students advanced to-day will close after the solemn high mass to-morrow morning.

SCHMITZ MUST FIND $160,000 OR BE JAILED

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—The grand jury last evening returned bribery indictments against the following:

President Patrick Calhoun of the United Railroads, fourteen indictments.

Thornwall Mullally, assistant to Calhoun, fourteen.

Attorneys Tirey L. Ford and W. M. Abbott of the legal department of the United Railroads, fourteen each.

Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz, fourteen.

Abraham Ruef, fourteen.

President Louis Glass of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company, two.

Theodore V. Halsey, formerly an agent of that corporation, one.

Ruef, Schmitz, Calhoun, Mullally, Ford and Abbott are charged with bribery in connection with the fixing of the gas company's rates and with receiving $50,000 in the latter Rudolph Spreckels case.

Judge Coffey fixed bail in the sum of $10,000 on each of the charges and gave the accused until to-morrow noon to furnish bonds.

Schmitz, in addition to $50,000 security he has already given to procure his liberty pending trial of the five counts of extortion brought against him and Ruef jointly, will have to put up $110,000 in bonds.

MELLEN GETS RAILROAD LINK

President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford settled his differences with the Boston & Albany railroad before the Legislative Committee yesterday and secured thereby a connection between the New Haven and the Boston & Maine systems at Springfield.

The New Haven in settling the matter not only secures what is asked for, trackage rights across the city of Springfield, but also secures the right to extend its system to the point where the Boston & Maine comes off onto the north.

Among railroad men this is regarded as one of the significant things to follow the negotiations for a merger between the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine, through individual transfers of a controlling interest of the stock of the Boston & Maine.

BRITONS TEAR DOWN OUR FLAG

WINNIPEG, Man., May 25.—In an unhappy incident that marred Victoria day, the American flag was torn from its staff at the vice-consulate here.

For the first time in many years the Union Jack was floated at the American consulate, Dr. Jones, the recently appointed vice-consul, paying this compliment to the Canadian people.

Seeing the British flag flying beneath the Stars and Stripes, two men, said to be recent arrivals from England, tore down the American flag.

MAYOR FILES ANSWER TO ARCHITECT'S SUIT

Corporation Counsel Thomas M. Babson has filed in the Supreme Court a motion to dismiss the bill in equity brought by Architect James E. McLaughlin against Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and the Board of Trustees of the Boston consumptives' hospital. Babson claims that the matter is not one for the courts to determine as the Mayor, he asserts, only exercised his discretionary powers when he refused to affirm of the selection of Mr. McLaughlin as the architect of the proposed new hospital. In the bill in equity brought by the architect he alleges that Mayor Fitzgerald was actuated by political motives in refusing to approve of his selection.

LOST PENSION, ENDS HER LIFE

Discouraged at the tidings that a flaw in her pension claim prevented her from receiving the money, Mrs. Mary Bacon, seventy-one years old, widow of a Civil War veteran, committed suicide by inhaling gas at the home of Mrs. Catherine Hanson, at No. 36 Lee street, Cambridge. Mrs. Bacon formerly lived in Lisbon, Me., but owing to lack of funds was obliged to go to the State almshouse in Tewksbury. She was taken from there some time ago by Mrs. Hanson, with whom she had been living ever since.

Miss Constance, who is the youngest of Mrs. William B. Bacon's three handsome daughters, is considered by many the belle of the Vincent Club, of which she is a prominent member.

Mr. Greenleaf is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard C. Greenleaf of New York and Newport and is a Yale, '00, man.

The pretty blonde coloring of the bride is well set off by her princess gown of softest white liberty, trimmed with point lace, over which falls a veil of the finest lace.

Miss Emily Bacon is her sister's maid of honor. Her older sister, Elsie, who marries Joseph Lovering of Commonwealth avenue in the early Autumn; Martha Bacon, daughter of Robert Bacon, ambassador to France, and Alexi Schenck, both favorite cousins of the bride; Miss Rosamond Dhert, one of the past season's most popular belles; Miss Bessie Stone and Alice Bowker are her bridesmaids.

Robert Bacon is giving the bride away.

Robert T. Greenleaf, Jr., is his brother's best man, and the ushers are J. T. Mills, Jr., Cross, F. W. Allen, E. S. Sands, J. Mel. Welton, David T. Dana, F. W. Brock and R. F. Elliot.

An alfresco reception and breakfast at the Bacon estate on Stockbridge road followed the ceremony.

FINDS OIL TRUST CAN BE OUSTED

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 25.—That the evidence introduced before him in the suit to oust the Standard Oil Company and tributary companies from Missouri, is the report made to the Missouri Supreme Court by Commissioner Anthony, Judge Anthony finds that the Standard, Waters-Pierce and Republic oil companies entered into an agreement to control refining of oil. He recommends that their charters be revoked, and holds that the Supreme Court has the authority to make the ruling of ouster.

The findings of the commissioner sustain in toto the contentions of Attorney-General Hadley.

'I WAS IN LOVE, THEREFORE I WAS INSANE,' A WOMAN'S STARTLING DEFENCE---THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

Husband's Riches Used in Plot Against Her, Mrs. Gould Charges

AMAZING REVELATIONS IN POLICE INVESTIGATION OF DIVORCE CONSPIRACY.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Amazing revelations of the alleged Howard Gould plot to divorce his wife, formerly Katherine Clemmons, were made known today by Mrs. Gould herself to Police Commissioner Bingham, when, in company with Clarence Shearn, her counsel, she visited him in his office at police headquarters.

That Clarence Hyde and other detectives have been sent to bound her was the remarkable charge made by the multi-millionaire's wife.

Mrs. Gould put Commissioner Bingham in possession of many entirely new facts concerning the case, and their use of such deep interest that the investigation, instead of ending with Inspector McLaughlin's retirement, will now be taken up more actively than ever with the idea of driving out of the department every possible member of the "system."

Declares Hummel in Plot.

A woman friend of Mrs. Gould who, with Clarence Shearn, her counsel, accompanied her to police headquarters, consented to repeat some of the statements made to the Commissioner by Mrs. Gould.

"The newest and most sensational thing Mrs. Gould said was that Abraham Hummel, the lawyer, who is now in the penitentiary for blackening the Dodge-Morse correspondence, seemed to have some mysterious connection with the affair that was being made to blacken her reputation. Of course, if Hummel had been in touch with Mr. Gould or Mr. Nicoll, Mrs. Gould cannot tell, but she does know that at a time shortly after Mr. Gould and Mr. Nicoll began to direct the movements of some of the central office detectives, she received a warning direct from Hummel to the effect that the police detectives were being used to shadow every movement she made.

"How Hummel came in possession of this information and could tell what Mr. Gould and his lawyer were doing I am unable to say, and Mrs. Gould didn't pretend to tell the commissioner. I do know, however, that it aroused the intense interest of the commissioner and he seemed to think it an excellent opportunity to open up a new line of investigation by sending for Hummel and asking him to make a sworn statement of all he knows about the conspiracy.

"It was perfectly clear to Mrs. Gould at the time she received warning for Hummel that he had in some way crossed wires with Mr. Nicoll, but on this point she could only surmise for Mr. Bingham.

Under Police Espionage.

"This was in last November and since that time Mrs. Gould has been aware of constant espionage.

"Mrs. Gould also declared that twelve years ago Inspector Byrnes, who was then in charge of the detective bureau, obtained large sums of money from members of the Gould family to try to accomplish the very thing McLaughlin has recently been working. At that time George Gould and other members of the Gould family were leaving no stone unturned to discourage Howard from making love to Edith.

She told Mr. Bingham that in after years this became a constant topic of conversation in the Gould family and that no member of it ever denied that a great fortune had been spent by using the detective bureau under the Byrnes regime. This was the reason for her refusal of the invitation to meet Inspector McLaughlin at dinner at the home of H. H. Rogers, one of Mr. Gould's society friends.

Mail Tampered With.

"Mrs. Gould also told the commissioner about how her mail had been tampered with and gave him certain important information in this connection on which he may be able to make arrests. Mrs. Gould also agreed to see the commissioner again if she could aid him in punishing those who have been using their detective bureau authority to frighten people."

Important as appeared to be Mrs. Gould and the commissioner was, it was in fact no more interesting than the developments of what great pressure was brought to bear to save McLaughlin from the wrath of the police department.

It is learned that his most powerful ally was Supreme Court Judge McCall, who for several days at the height of the fight has been under the hottest kind of fire has been visiting city offices who might be in a position to save him.

Search Actress's Record.

Word was received from San Francisco that Charles Morris, a private agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, a resident in the Golden Gate City, was made to assume the role of a private detective in the Gould marital troubles. On two occasions during last March he was hustled about Palo Alto, where Mrs. Gould's mother and stepfather live, on the orders of some New York lawyer. There he had long conversations with Mrs. Gould's stepfather, and went all over the ground of the story of Mrs. Gould's supposed bigamous marriage, which has been so pitilessly blasted by local investigation.

He tried to get information from Mr. Dayan which would help bolster up such a story, but naturally he obtained nothing that could be made to operate against Mrs. Gould.

GEN. MILES TO MARSHAL 'OLD HOME' WEEK

Great Civic and Trades Street Demonstration Takes Place New England Day.

LIPTON TO GIVE A TROPHY

Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., has just announced his acceptance of the invitation to be present in Boston on Old Home week and act as chief marshal of the grand civic and trades parade, which is to be held on New England Day, Wednesday, July 3d.

Sir Thomas J. Lipton has offered a cup for the fisherman's race. Members of the Old Home Week executive committee, of which John F. Fitzgerald is chairman, are delighted with General Miles's acceptance of the invitation.

It has been suggested to the executive committee that parties of Thursday and Friday of Old Home Week be given over to automobile events, that a parade be held on Sunday and a hill-climbing contest be held on Corey Hill on Friday.

Automobile Events.

At the meeting of the general executive committee which was held in the Mayor's office the following were appointed a committee in general charge of automobile events: John F. MacAllman, A. E. Morrison, S. K. Dingle, O. B. Cole, F. A. Hinchcliffe, Harry Foolick, F. W. Maguire, C. E. Wheeler, George H. Lowe, J. S. Hathaway, Charles E. Jay, K. M. Black, George J. Tunham, John L. Snow, Fred S. Smith, E. B. Burt, H. A. Skinner, A. F. Underhill, E. Wing, E. D. Dodge, A. T. Fuller, George Squiers, Ralph F. Clough, Arthur E. Adams, Fred J. Tyler, E. T. Kimball, W. H. Mills, J. M. Linscott, N. S. Sanders, C. F. Waltner, A. J. Coburn, George M. Queston, John Sullivan, F. T. Sprague, L. R. Speare, Dr. Rust, George W. McNear, Chester I. Campbell, W. J. McDonald.

The following were appointed as a committee on Old Home Week musical features: Josiah Quincy, chairman; George F. Daniels, Edgar A. Franklin, William A. Leahy, C. W. Thompson, John Miller and H. J. Storer.

To Ask Mills to Close.

In view of the fact that the managers of the Massachusetts cotton mills are planning to close down for a week next September, it was voted to request them to select the week of July 28-August 3, in order that the operatives may have an opportunity of attending the Boston home-coming festivities.

It was announced that the New England A. A. A. U., through President Michael F. Winston, had accepted the committee's invitation to take charge of the Old Home Week amateur athletic events.

The Mayor was authorized to appoint a committee of five to make up an appropriation budget.

It was announced that the retail merchants of the city are to hold a meeting at the headquarters of the Boston Merchants Association next Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. to form a committee to co-operate with the general Old Home Week committee in the matter of decorations, advertising and invitations to out-of-town customers.

BECKER'S FATE MAY HANG ON THUMB PRINT

Bloody Mark on Knife That Caused Girl's Death Likely to Solve Mystery.

ADMITS BEING PRESENT

NEW YORK, May 25.—With his fate depending upon the examination to be made to-day of a bloody thumb print on the handle of the knife with which fifteen-year Amelia Elizabeth was slain, Henry Becker, the suspect, who has confessed to having been a witness to the crime, cringes in his cell at Elmhurst, L. I. and seems that it was a tall, dark Star who stabbed the little girl.

Every detective and patrolman in Greater New York has a description of the friend of Becker's, who is suspected of having played the part in the murder, and is on the lookout for the man. It is believed that the arrest will take place before night, as his name and haunt are known.

Wax Cast of Knife Handle.

Meanwhile a wax cast of the bloody thumb print on the knife handle is being made. When it is completed the comparison will be made with Becker's thumb prints. Though the man under arrest protests steadily that his only part in the crime was that of a witness, the coils are rapidly tightening about him, and even though it develops that his companion, for whom the police are now searching, was the one who struck the fatal blow, the police expect to prove that Becker was an accessory to the killing.

The police have a handkerchief found in Becker's pocket and a shirt which he took to the laundry immediately after the crime. Each bears blood, it which the police believe to be blood, and the shirt is also suspected. The shirt was taken to the Chinese laundry. The handkerchief was stolen from the clothesline of Mrs. Simonson, at whose well Becker washed his hands.

Mother Swears Vengeance.

The heartbroken mother of Amelia swore to-day to take vengeance on Becker should he prove to be the slayer of her child.

Mrs. William Stafford is a kindly-faced German housewife, mother of eleven children, of whom Amelia was the youngest. She broke into weeping and lamentation to-day as she told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter of the happiness the little girl made in their household and the gloom that has come since her death.

"I swear that I will have vengeance on the fiend who killed her," she said.

"When I heard of this man's arrest I went for a gun to kill him if I could get him. But now I am not one to take life from him if he turns out to be the right man. I swear I will kill him for taking the life of my baby girl."

VANITY FAIR PARK THROWN OPEN TO-DAY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 25.—Vanity Fair opens to-day. At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon the gates of that enormously expensive amusement resort, aptly designated "the park beautiful," swing open to the multitude of pleasure-seekers, the formal inauguration following at 2 o'clock. This is under the direction of a special inaugural committee, headed by Mayor McCarthy, and including such other dignitaries as the Town Council of East Providence, the Mayors of Fall River, Taunton, Worcester and Woonsocket, the town officials of Pawtucket, Attleboro, Westerly and other communities.

It is provided that the dedicatory address shall be delivered by Mayor McCarthy, and its closing sentences are to be taken as the signal for the informal opening of Vanity Fair and its varied attractions.

Some Shows Not Quite Ready.

As was to have been expected, in an undertaking of this magnitude, notwithstanding the fact that the builders have done everything possible to complete their contract on time, Vanity Fair to-day is not in as altogether finished condition. There are several big shows, which it was hoped would be ready, that for one reason or another await the finishing touches.

One of these is the infant incubator building, which, although about completed, cannot be opened to-day, and probably will not be ready for visitors much before Memorial Day. This is undoubtedly the most scientific and it is also one of the most interesting of all the Vanity Fair attractions.

Here, under the direction of Mr. C. C. Penn, the manager, and his corps of physicians and nurses, there will be placed an incubator, little if any existing, specially designed for and adapted to the purpose of saving the lives of those tiny mites of humanity.

While the "real" shows are sure to draw the crowds, it is, after all, the free show upon which the management of Vanity Fair are dependent for a popular verdict, and in this respect everything possible will be done to secure it. The band concerts alone, by the Salem Cadet Band, unquestionably the finest in New England, are a powerful magnet. They will be given every afternoon and evening beginning with to-day's inaugural, and the programmes for each week will be strictly high class and very select.

Free Concert Every Day.

Adjoining the band stand, on a higher elevation, overlooking the grand lagoon, is the circus ring, in which every afternoon and evening a host of Vanity Fair will be treated to a free circus, including a series of the most popular of aerial acts.

American Children Have No Fathers, Says Dorothy Dix

By DOROTHY DIX

THE misfortune to the American child of having only one parent, and that parent generally as unsophisticated, unworldly, unanalytic, sentimental woman, fails as heavily upon girls as it does upon boys.

This view of the matter will surprise most people, because in a hazy kind of a way an idea prevails that there is a peculiar bond of sympathy between mothers and daughters and that a woman is better fitted to be guide, philosopher and friend to a girl child than any man is.

For this reason the American father turns his daughters over to his wife's complete dominion, and seldom dreams of taking any personal part in their rearing. He considers that he is doing his full duty when he supplies the money to indulge their every whim and extravagance.

Of his devotion there can be no doubt. Everything that is chivalrous, and fine, and tender in his nature goes out to his daughters.

He works himself into the grave that they may have fine clothes, live in fine houses, and go in fine Summer resorts. And the pampered American girl is the flower of romance of our sordid commercial life. It is to support her that bump-shouldered, gray-headed, nerve-wrecked men toil and spend their strength in offices and stores.

Really Are Fatherless

It will shock a great many of these self-congealing American fathers to tell them that except for the conventional prejudice about having a known father, and the comfort of a pocketbook, their daughters had just as well not have a father at all as to have them. They fail in all the essential obligations of fatherhood to their daughters.

And girls need fathers. In every biography of a great man stress is laid upon the influence of his mother, and the influence she had on his development and character.

The same thing is true of the great woman and her father. Every notable woman that you can recall to mind you will see the daughter of some man of talent, and strength, and who had had some strong masculine influence on her early life.

Nor do you have to go to history to find he advantage to a woman's character it is to have been blessed with a father instead of a parent who is only a heck book.

You see it in every-day life sanely intead of hysterically. Who is unspoiled and bound in her view, and who has a decent regard for keeping her word and working to the bargain she has made, you will find that she had had a good father, and not one who was chummy with her.

Hard for the Girl

The American girl's lack of a father also takes her the prey of circumstances as no other girl to the world is. She is the only girl among civilized people whose future is trusted to luck. No decency is saved for her, no effort is made to establish her comfortably in life.

As a general thing she is dressed beyond her means, and has tastes inculcated in her that she has no means of gratifying, and then she is left to shift for herself.

It looks as if a man who knows how fierce is the competition in business, even for a man, would take some pains to teach the girl who must earn her own bread and butter some profession or trade by which she could best do it, but you seldom hear of a poor man who has exercised the most elementary care toward his daughter.

Certainly it would seem that the rich father who has money to leave his daughter would instruct her in regard to investments and the handling of wealth so that she would not be a helpless victim of the first plausible thief that got hold of her inheritance.

But how very, very rarely a man takes the trouble to do this is abundantly proven by the hosts of defrauded women who have lost their property through default-ers whom that we all number among our acquaintances.

Women Can Learn

Yet there is nothing in business, or money handling, so mysterious and recondite that a woman could not grasp it if only she had been fortunate enough to have had a father who would have explained things to her and taught her the things that she had to learn through bitterness and tears.

The great tragedy of the fatherless woman, however, comes in when a girl goes to marry. Every girl on earth who is in love has a crying need for a father to sit in cold, calm, and judgment on the man she proposes to marry. No girl and no girl's mother is fitted to cope with the subject, and it is because this matter, the most important in a girl's life, is left to feminine decision that we have so many unhappy and unfortunate marriages.

No woman really knows anything about a man, nor has she any way of finding out the truth about him, but men have all the grips and passwords of the brotherhood.

It is no trick at all for a man to size up the Tomas, Dicks and Harrys who come courting his daughter, and to ascertain whether they drink, gamble, are immoral characters, and yet he has one of the most valuable of the knowledge of the food things that a girl in love is liable to do, how few men there are who can resist the temptation to sin if they meet him at the altar.

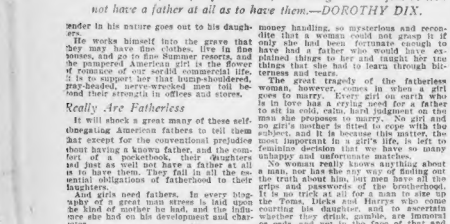
Should Be Careful

It is the bounden duty of every man to consult with the tooth comb for vermin every youth who gets to hanging around his girls, and he [illegible] is undesirable to tip his daughters off to what kind of a fellow Algernon or Percy is, and it is left to do this his daughters are worse than fatherless.

Just what a father can do to prevent a romantic and dazzled girl, aided and abetted by a foolish mother, from precipitating herself into lifelong misery has just been illustrated by one level-headed American father who has refused to put up the money for a durch son-in-law and thus prevented another international matrimonial catastrophe.

A good mother is a good chaperon, but the best chaperon on earth is a shrewd old father, and the American girl is so unfortunate in nothing else as being fatherless.

Except for the conventional prejudice about having a known father and the comfort of a pocketbook, their daughters had just as well not have a father at all as to have them.—DOROTHY DIX.



Certainly it would seem that the rich father who has money to leave his daughters would instruct them in regard to investments and the handling of wealth.—DOROTHY DIX.

She Says Egotism as Displayed by Women Is the One Most Fearful Disturber of Sanity

By Winifred Black

FOUR young girls killed themselves at the same hour in Iowa a few days ago. It turns out that they were just four out of ten members of a suicide club, and that the other six are bound by the rules of the club to commit suicide together within some stated time.

There is nothing surprising about this hideous story to me.

The one most fearful enemy to sanity in the world is egotism, and half the women I know don't think about a thing on earth but themselves from morning until night and from night until morning again.

"I, me, my new hat, my new dress, the way I do my hair, my pretty shoes, my beaux, my enemies, the girl who admires me, the man who don't care for me, the brother who laughs at me, the little sister I have to take care of, the dance I didn't get to go to, the candy the other girls had, and that I didn't take—

"Me, Me, Me!"

"I, I, me, me, me, mine, mine, mine"—why if I lived in a world as little as that, I'd join a suicide club today, and get out of it.

The middle-aged woman isn't so bad, she can't be, she has to think of her husband and her children and her servants, and she doesn't regard the world as a huge mirror, good for nothing but to reflect her foolish little figure.

But, next to the young girl, the most awful egotist on earth is the woman with the digestion or the woman with nerves, or the woman with an inherited tendency to something or other which she is carefully nursing to hand down to her own children.

Heaven Save Us!

ALL she thinks of is her food and whether it will agree with her or not.

Take her for a walk in the green fields, and she doesn't feel the perfume of the roses, she doesn't take a deep draught of the sweet life-giving air and thank heaven for the glorious privilege of living; not she.

"This walk will agree with me," she thinks; "it will make me sleep, and what an appetite I'll have for luncheon."

Go with her for an evening at the theatre and she doesn't laugh and enjoy the play; not she.

"This will divert my mind," she says to herself. "I must fix my attention on it; I can feel my eyes brightening already, I believe I am feeling a little better; yes, that pain in my left elbow is almost stopping."

Heaven save us all from the hideous insanity of egotism in whatever form it comes to pester us!

Safeguards Against Fires in the Home

THIS is the first of a series of three short lessons on "Fire Don'ts for the Home." By reading them carefully and remembering to follow them the housewife will reduce the danger of fire to a minimum.

NEVER turn on the gas, and, when your match goes out before you have ignited the gas, step away, find another, and light it. Series of horrible accidents have resulted from this.

* * *

When grease or fat boils over on the stove, do not throw water on it. It will make it worse. Use baking soda or salt. Ashes will smother it.

* * *

* * *

At no time close the door of the cook stove so that a strong draft will operate, and then leave the room for any great time. Overheated stoves are responsible for a great many fires.

* * *

One of the greatest of all fire dangers is to have heating pipes close to the woodwork or rafters.

* * *

A swinging gas bracket is a constant danger in the home. If you use one, have the burner protected by a wire screen, or a globe.

* * *

Do not use a flexible rubber hose in connection with your gas stove. It is dangerous and has caused hundreds of fires and deaths.

EGG SAUCE

BOIL one pint of milk and one small onion. Melt one tablespoon of butter in frying pan; add two tablespoons of flour; stir until it bubbles (take out onion) add it to the milk and stir. Boil hard eight eggs; separate whites from yolks; cut whites into small pieces and mix it in the milk; cut bread into small squares and lay them in a flat dish; pour hot sauce over it and with a spoon strain yolks over it all. When ready to serve, heat golden red.

MISS M. A. LEAL,
200 Vine street, E. Cambridge, Mass.

POTATO SALAD

SIX medium sized, cold boiled potatoes cut in cubes; two hard-boiled eggs, mashed fine, and one teaspoon of chopped onion. Mix these together with a silver fork and add the following dressing: Three tablespoons of olive oil or melted butter if you prefer; two tablespoons of vinegar, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon of mustard and a dash of celery salt. A little chopped parsley sprinkled over all is very nice if you have it.

BEEF LOAF.

Three pounds bottom of round steak, with small piece of suet put through chopper, one cup of cracker crumbs, two beaten eggs and two small onions chopped fine. Season with salt and pepper and spiced seasoning if you like. Form into a loaf and put into a hot oven.

Baste for one hour, basting often with a tablespoon of melted butter mixed with two of hot water. When done take from pan and thicken gravy with spoon of flour mixed with a little cold water and pour over meat. This is delicious.

MRS. KATHLEEN E. STEWART,
No. 3 Varick street, Dorchester.

FRENCH FRIED CLAMS

HAVE a deep kettle of fat, such as they fry doughnuts in, a long-handle fork, a wire skimmer and a nice hot fire and you are ready. Shell 25 or 30 clams and wash them in two or three waters and drain well. Then batter as follows: One egg beaten, four tablespoons sweet milk, stir one-half cup of pastry flour on that and before stirring add one even teaspoon of baking powder. Then stir all together and add a little more flour until it is quite stiff. Now put five or six clams in it and move them around with a fork. Drop one at a time in hot fat which must be blue hot to obtain good results. I use two pounds of lard as I always put my French fried potatoes in when I fry the clams. If you want clams in meal you beat one egg and dip the clams in the egg, then in the meal and into the hot fat and fry a golden brown.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

HARD LINES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-three years of age, and have been keeping company with a young lady nearly two years my senior for at least a year, and at first we seemed very fond to each other, but now she has been somewhat cold and indifferent.

He is always very kind and never fails to keep his engagements with me, but I cannot understand why he has become so different. He seems sad and also seems to be worrying over something or other.

What I want to know is do you really think he still loves me, or do you think the reason he is so sad is that he would like to quit her company with me and does not like to say so? I love him so dearly, as ever.

HEART BROKEN.

WHY not ask him what is troubling him? Ask him if he feels that his friendship with you is too binding. Tell him that, though you are very fond of him, you would not for a moment hold him if he were unhappy. I think you will be able to get at the true state of affairs.

BETTER ASK HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady and have been keeping company with a young man whose age is my senior for at least a year, and at first we seemed very fond to each other, but now he has been somewhat cold and indifferent.

He is always very kind and never fails to keep his engagements with me, but I cannot understand why he has become so different. He seems sad and also seems to be worrying over something or other.

What I want to know is do you really think he still loves me, or do you think the reason he is so sad is that he would like to quit her company with me and does not like to say so? I love him so dearly, as ever.

HEART BROKEN.

IT may be that she is trying to arouse your jealousy by going with your friend. Do not give in without making an effort to keep her. Do all you can to interest her, and I think you will succeed. If this plan does not work, try what indifference will do.

Boston American's Expert Tells How to Take Care of the Hair

Last in a Series of Three Great Articles

THIS is the third and last of the series of lessons on the care of the hair by the famous beauty expert, Mme. Lenore Lenoir.

SINGEING the hair is something that is earnestly advocated by specialists, but it is doubtful if it does the hair much good, after all. Yet, since there are so many who believe in it, there is no harm in continuing it.

To singe the hair, you take a lock and roll it tightly down to the very end. Now, with the tip of your finger, you run along the lock, pressing the loose ends. A lighted taper does the rest.

Take the taper in your hand, with the flame burning clearly, and run it quickly along the lock. The ends of the hair will turn off, the tip rest of the lock, if you have managed skilfully, is not injured. It will be done as often as once in two months.

For Glossy Hair

Girls who want glossy hair have various ways of obtaining it. Here is a Paris recipe, just as it was purchased from a French hair culturist last Summer: Take enough finely-ground cornmeal to fill a teacup. Put it in a double boiler and heat it, for sure it is fine.

Now sectitter it in the hair, which should be bone dry, and let it lie upon the scalp for five minutes.

Take a perfectly new hair brush, or one that has been washed and baked in the oven, and run it through the hair.

Then add brush until there is not a particle of the cornmeal left. The hair will soon be dry and shining. A tooth brush will be required to take the meal off the scalp.

Waving the hair is a distinct art, and few have acquired it. The hair should be very fine, and it should have one good wave the hair the day it is washed.

There will be moisture left in the hair, no matter how carefully it is dried. The time to wave the hair is a day later.

The Right Wave

Before beginning take your perfume spray and lightly sprinkle the hair with scent. Let it dry for five minutes. Now take your waving tongs, which should be large and small, and, taking a lock in your hand, twist it around the tongs, giving a final turn to make the hair tight.

Do not make the tongs hot, but have them just warm enough to penetrate the oils of the hair. Twist the hair well round the iron and hold it firmly while on count sixty.

There is a famous hair-waver in Paris who lets his patients count sixty while he holds the tongs. In this manner he gets over the entire head.

Waving just the surface of the hair is bad. The waves will break and show the plain surface underneath, where the hair not waved.

There is another wave, and this, too, is simple, but it is only for those who have naturally dry hair. The hair is lightly brushed with oil to make it shine. Not more than three drops are used, but it is enough. It is then waved, and the waves are re-held a minute each. The result is a glossy and very deep wave.

To Retain Color

When the hair is turning gray it should be treated.

There is no need to have gray hair before one is old. Too many women are gray or dirty and under. The hair can be made to hold its color.

Those who have the hair culturists call a "sick scalp," meaning one where the hair grows; that is, dull and gray, can be cured it by the castor-oil treatment, which, though unpleasant, is good.

The hair is parted, the finger-tips are then dipped in castor-oil, and the parting is spatted with it. Another parting is made, and so on, until the entire scalp has been treated. Only a very little should be used. One hair culturist makes a few drops suffice for three heads.

Coloring the hair is a thing that is open to objection, yet it is often done. For red hair henna is used, and about three pennyworth of it is steeped in a pint of water, which simmers down to a cupful. The hair is shampooed, and then soaked in the henna tea.

In using the castor-oil treatment, the hair is parted, the finger-tips are then dipped in oil and the parting is spatted with it.

To make the hair glossy scatter cornmeal in it, and then brush the meal out. A tooth brush may be necessary to remove the meal from the scalp.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

By the Professor

EYEBROWS UNRULY

DEAR PROFESSOR:

My eyebrows meet at the bridge of my nose and they are unruly and lie in all directions. Can you give me any formula that will make them lie smooth; may be required to take the brush off my nose?

J. K. D.

THE electric needle is the only sure remedy for the superfluous hair, but you can keep the brows looking well if you pull them out regularly where they grow. Also you need to brush them smooth paste them down at night with mucilage or with wrinkle paper; all this is familiar to every girl. The only way to get them in order is to keep them in place. Proper direction until they do so as a matter of habit.

CUCUMBER CREAM

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you give me the formula for a good cucumber cream or lotion? Is it a difference what kind I use, ripe or green cucumbers?

MARCIA.

RIPE cucumbers give more juice than green, so should be used in making the cream. Take one-half pint of juice; one and a half ounces of alcohol; 2½ ounces of sweet almond oil; one dram of sharing soap; 15 drops of oil of bitter almonds. Dissolve the shaving cream in a double boiler by heating rose water; heat the alcohol in a mortar and by degrees work in the soap and water; strain through muslin and return to the mortar; stir constantly, working in gradually the alcohol in which the oils have already been dissolved. This is very whitening, softening and cleansing.

"THE HERITAGE OF HATE"

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.

MR. NUDD drew himself up with conscious pride as he spoke. It was certainly a fact that he had that day sent Mrs. Higgs a present of money equivalent to a week of her husband's wages. It was the first time that he had done so since the date of Higgs's accident, when the mere fact of his paying up the whole week, and not making a deduction for short day greatly surprised Mrs. Higgs that she had begun to think him actually generous. The £15 sent to-day had been bestowed solely in order that he might be able to speak of the charitable action this evening. And he reaped his reward. Pauline's indifference toward him began to warm into a slight interest. She had never been really spoken of, but it now occurred to her that she liked Mr. Nudd's dignified and unkindly his acquaintances did him a wrong.

Having this increasing cordiality toward him, he continued his fabulous narrative, painting in flattering colors. It rose to wonder in the mind of the young lady with her at all, for her beauty and fine figure. Mr. Nudd's admiration somewhat awed him. It was his first experience of the society of well-dressed women, and he vaguely felt that their manners were perfect. Pauline's manner was largely obscured by the refinement and splendor of Miss Ethel and Lady Wynn. More than once he was compelled inwardly to pull himself together with confidential self-assurances.

"Miss Heath, will you take me to see the new odontoglossum? You know how interested I am in horticultural triumphs."

The speaker was Gilbert Wynn, and the tone of his voice, and the smile with which he accompanied his words, told as plainly as possible that he was not at all interested in Pauline from the tedium of Mr. Nudd's recital.

He had not exactly gathered what the subject of this discourse actually was, but he felt that, whatever it might be, it was not veritable love romance of any kind. Nudd glared up at him, resenting the interruption, and more angrily did he scowl when he saw Pauline rise and prepare to accept the middle-aged dandy to the conservatory.

A feeling of ingnaucious mortification, which was perfectly unreasonable, crept into Mr. Nudd's conceited bosom as they walked away together, Pauline smiling and listening to the remarks of Wynn with as much interest apparently as she had recently accorded to himself.

The injured financier's wrath was in that pink gown, with its occasional gleams of white, and the young man of more than young for that gray-headed Wynn to think of him as a possible bride.

More Money

Mr. Nudd did not recognise that the striking effect of Gilbert Wynn's personal appearance was owing to the piquant contrast between the youthfulness of his features and black mustache and the premature gray of his close-cut hair.

The little lawyer himself was barely five years younger than Wynn, as a matter of fact he had been forty on his last birthday—but his own hair retained its sandy coloring under his first youth, and the long bonds of the other man.

He is always until the two figures had disappeared from sight among the waving ferns and palms, the luxuriance of the conservatory; then he turned to approach Miss Heath, resolving grimly that it was a good thing after all that he should be early alone with her. She also apparently had something in particular to say to him, for she rose from her chair and came hastily toward him.

"I shall require a further advance in the course of next week, Mr. Nudd," she announced in an undertone, with the dignified reticence and brevity of one touching on a long-familiar subject. "Two or three thousand dollars. Two thousand will do, I think; but I shall want the money by Thursday."

Her haughty, confident tone—as though she were conferring a favor instead of asking one—evidently nettled Mr. Nudd. This was the first result of his increased familiarity. A crafty look came into his eyes; he gave his head the peculiar little jerk he had learned to know so well.

"Two thousand, and at such short notice," in a large sum, Mrs. Heath," he answered. "I must beg to remind you that I am not invincible. I cannot go on continually supplying you with money without any return."

"You have your ultimate security," she rejoined, still haughtily. "You have the money. What more do you want?"

Mr. Nudd smiled a little disagreeably, and kept his small eyes fixed steadily upon her. Some suggestion that she read in them seemed to frighten her. Her hauteur vanished, and something very like a cowed look came on her handsome face.

A Proposition

"I don't want to be exacting," said the little lawyer, with a slow smoothness that was infinitely unpleasant to the strongwilled woman, who could not help feeling that she stood in the position of his victim. "But I think it is as well to point out to you that the interest is constantly accumulating on the heavy sums which you have been repeatedly borrowing during the last twelve years, and that even if the mortgages cannot forever be sufficient security. However, I suppose we make a compromise? That is to say, I will advance this money to oblige you, on condition that you will allow me to do something to oblige me."

Mr. Heath opened her fine black eyes to their widest extent.

"What could possibly do oblige you?" she inquired, finding courage again to speak with an icy dignity of tone.

Mr. Nudd took three or four reflective steps up and down the room.

"You could use your influence to promote the fulfillment of certain legitimate aspirations—bold, I know, but nevertheless ardent, and, I think, justifiable—on your stepdaughter. I have given great consideration to the matter and am convinced that a marriage between Miss Heath and myself would be a suitable one in every way. As, however, the affair is delicate—"

Mrs. Heath interrupted him with a muttered exclamation. She had drawn back amazed at his proposition. The great lord of her elaborate dinner gown seemed, as it moved with her agitation, to emphasize her dignified astonishment.

"You marry Pauline?" she cried.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A Man of Gloom

"PAULINE!" Aubrey Heath had started in his high-backed chair with a cry, and was looking up in astonishment at the approaching figure of his daughter. For the first time in many months Pauline had entered his private library unasked and unannounced. She was advancing toward him with a look on her delicate face which told him as plainly as did her unusual intrusion that something out of the ordinary had happened at the dinner hour.

It was late afternoon, close upon 5 o'clock. The small oak-paneled library was flooded with light. The rays poured in through the latticed oriel windows, guarded though they were by heavy crimson curtains. It played on the carved bookshelves, on the antique bronzes, on the somber tapestries. It even seemed to dance in the dimmest recesses of the sleeping room, and to drive away the dull gloom that haunted it—a gloom which to a sensitive nature might have seemed to suggest that these walls knew and watched the secret workings of a man's life-sorrow, the sad act of a student's constant and laborious toil.

Good Tips for the Home Dressmaker

A Summer Hat

ONE can be made by using a dolly set—the large piece hollowed out to fit brim or wire frame; one small dolly for top of crown; the remaining five can be used as a rosette for sides of crown; fill under brim with gathered net or net, or wire can be covered with strips of ribbon; ribbon bow and ends. Wings are saved bits of work of embroidering and yet have a handsome hat, which is easily laundered.

Spanish Lace in Dainty Colors.

ELEGANT effects in silk Spanish lace, dyed in dainty colors, are among the latest vagaries of fashion and are extremely beautiful. They are made over chiffon-veiled satin or taffeta and trimmed with a minnitte of velvet ribbon or net, which are very soft and set off the bodice most delightfully.

To Hang a Skirt

A GOOD way to hang a skirt for one's self is to sew up seams, press nicely, baste tucks or plaits in place, put on band, then fold skirt in half and lay on table, and take a finished skirt which hangs correctly and lay over same, matching a basting or row of pins around bottom edge to mark where to turn up new skirt—as easy and satisfactory way. To put in sleeve correctly fold armhole, having centre fold one inch back of shoulder seam, and where the half comes join under seam of sleeve. This always insures a perfect fit.

"Setting" a Sleeve

TO set the sleeve in the body, pin the outer seam to the curved side of the back, about two inches below the shoulder seam. Slip on the waist lining and make any adjustments that are necessary. Gather the top part of the sleeve, being careful to distribute the gathers evenly. When basting in sleeve sew the sleeve in one piece and hold it towards you. One will be well repaid for time spent on this part of the work by the smooth, puffless sleeve that will spell the effect of a waist.

Garterettes

TO make a dainty pair of garterettes, fit a piece of hat elastic to the arm and with narrow ribbon run a fine edge of it, stretching the elastic a bit in so doing. Tack artificial flowers on one end and run ribbon through the elastic, covering. She whipped end of the bow. Where the bow comes make a rosette of narrow blue ribbon with a few flowers intermingled. Wear this to keep your long gloves and short sleeves in place.

Children's Drawers

MADE from the legs of worn old black stockings look well and are easy to make for children from one to five years of age. Measure size wanted from Winter under drawers, cut each stocking about half way beginbelow and set diamond-shaped piece in as seen in men's underwear.

To Fasten Buttons

SECURELY put thread through cloth, leaving a knot on the right side, then draw thread back to new button on over the knot and in washing it cannot rub off on the washboard.

ALGONQUIN CLUB MEMBER WAS "SNAPPED"

Boston American's Camera Man Has Secured Ten More for To-morrow's Paper.

$100 FOR THE LUCKY ONES

The snapshot man of the BOSTON AMERICAN has a member of the exclusive Algonquin Club added to his snapshot gallery.

The snapshot man has declared himself right along as a most democratic individual, taking pictures of old and young men and women, both rich and poor, employers and employers, without regard to age, weight or previous condition of servitude, is to speak.

Knows No Distinction.

So, on this principle, he has photographed cabmen and "kids," firemen and "marines, letter carriers and shoppers, anyone and everyone.

Last week he was out along Boylston street to get pictures for last Sunday's issue of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Claimants have been coming in during the week for the $10 prize that is awarded for the original of each of the ten pictures printed. Among those that remained unidentified were numbers three and nine in the snapshot group.

These two men were photographed together, but were placed separately in the snapshot group so that none of themselves would know they were taken together in the one photograph plate.

Snaps a Clubman.

Yesterday the two men came in. Number three, he in the light gray hat, is Alvah H. Warner of Salem, member of the Algonquin Club of this city, and in business at No. 68 Essex street, Boston. Number nine is K. L. E. Drake of Providence, Providence manager of the house for which Mr. Warner in Boston agent. The two had been to the Algonquin Club for luncheon and where "snapped" coming back down Berkeley street.

Meanwhile the snapshot man has ten more pictures, taken Thursday, which he will print in to-morrow's BOSTON AMERICAN. Get the paper and see if you are there. It may mean $10 for you.

CLUB MEN IN THE SNAPSHOT TEN

Alvah H. Warner, with the soft gray hat, and E. L. E. Drake, Providence, were just returning from luncheon at the Algonquin Club when "snapped."

SAUERKRAUT ENDED ROMANCE SWEARS DOREY

Rich Somerville Contractor Blames Diverse Appetites for Marital Woe.

"Sauerkraut and sausages ended my happy romance," declared wealthy John Dorey on the witness stand in the Probate Court of Middlesex County, defending himself in the separate maintenance suit of his young wife, who alleges cruel and abusive treatment.

Dorey, who is 65 years old, decying the story told by the girl's parents that he had ordered to buy her, declared that she had incurred prejudice by her own acts.

"I don't know why," he said, "I always treated her all right. I taught her to play whist, and I certainly was a good provider.

"Before we married I told her that I would expect her to be smart and to light the fire every morning. I told her I didn't expect her to love me as much as she would if I were younger.

Differed About Sauerkraut.

"We got along all right till she left me. We differed about very few things. One of them was her liking for sausages at the time, while I wanted assistant and sparerib."

Dorey testified that his wife asked him point blank to marry her, the first time they met.

"I used to call at Tim Gunning's house in Jamaica Plain to play cards," he said, "and John Gunning, my wife's father, lived down stairs and I had to knock at his door to get upstairs. The next time I met my present mother-in-law I told her I was a bachelor and had no prospect that I get a housekeeper. She said she had three daughters.

"I met Minnie, now my wife, and asked her: 'Will you be my housekeeper?' She replied: 'Yes, if you will marry me.'

"I replied, 'Well, if you put it that way, I will be more than glad to.'

"I Had the Greatest Happiness."

"We were married August 8, 1905, and went back to Somerville that night in a hack.

"Up to the time of my wife's leaving me I had the greatest happiness. I never had a cross word or an argument with her. We went to the theatre together and made frequent calls on relatives. I took her into Boston to one of the matinees and told the proprietor to give her anything she should ask for. I brought my friends out to dine with us, as I was proud of my little wife and wanted them to meet her.

"We took a trip to Peak's Island, Me., and there we had nothing but happiness. We were the happiest couple in Massachusetts.

"My wife was most devoted to me. She Judge Lawton continued the case until Monday next to hear. Often she used to get up out of bed when I came in late and cook what food she could, sometimes till midnight. She was very affectionate. In the morning as I would be going out she would kiss me good-bye, follow me to the stairs, hug and kiss me again, and after I had gone downstairs she would lean over the bannister and ask for another kiss. She always brushed my hair and showed many loving little attentions for my personal comfort."

CHINA KEEPER HELD FOR THEFT

John Gallant, fifty years old, who has been in charge of the silver and china at the Essex House for a number of years, was admitted to Sergeant O'Neill of Station 1 that he had purchased the silverware. He was on his way to his lodgings, No. 10 Henry street, East Boston, at an early hour to-day, when cops, saucers and dinner plates, protruding from his overcoat pocket, attracted the attention of Reserve Officer McDonald who arrested him.

Subsequent search of his room disclosed additional pieces of silver and china to the value of $25, all being identified by the Essex House people as their property, and Gallant was held for larceny.

DISCOVER PLOT TO KILL KAISER

BERLIN, May 25.—The police have arrested several Russian students here. They say they found among their papers formulae for making bombs and explosives. It is stated that the arrest of Russian students was the result of accumulated evidence that they were associated with a Russo-German Anarchist plot to assassinate the Kaiser.

Thirty-five, including three women, were arrested. Twenty-five have since been released upon the establishment of their comparative innocence. Six of the others were expelled from the country.

SAYS KINDNESS WAS ILL REPAID

On the charge of appropriating his pal Samaritan's entire outfit of clothes, his worth P. Bowen, nineteen years old 307 Fourmin street, Providence, R. I., peared before the Dedham court today, and had his case continued.

According to the story unfolded in court Bowen appeared at the Readville race track last Wednesday and said he was "broke." One Alvah E. Clay gave him a dollar, and said a dollar, and that night when Bowen complained of being sick he shared half his bed with him. When Clay woke up he found Bowen had departed in the still hours of darkness and so had his suit of clothes, one watch, two pins and one ring.

LOST MILLBURY PASTOR FOUND

MILLBURY, May 25.—Rev. Charles H. Dalrymple, pastor of the Unitarian Church, who left town suddenly a week ago, has been heard from in Chicago, where A. C. Winter, treasurer of the church, had a letter this morning from Rev. Mr. Dalrymple. This is the only letter known to have been received in Millbury from Rev. Mr. Dalrymple since he went away. If the family has heard from him it is denied, and the postmaster has not been notified to forward his mail.

GOLD FEVER IN PHILIPPINES

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Because of the incorporations of Zambonga Gold Mining Company at Zamboanga, Philippine Islands, the gold fever has broken out in certain parts of the archipelago, according to the reports of officials sent to Washington.

While it has been known for years that there was gold in the mountains surrounding Zamboanga, few efforts have been made to prospect for it, owing to the difficult nature of the country and unsettled conditions.

How to Paint a House Cheap

And Have It Guaranteed to Look Better, Wear Longer, and Cost Less Than Any Other Paint.

Never Fades, Cracks, Chalks, Peels or Blisters, and Is Not Affected By Gases or Salt Air. Fifty Sample Colors Prepaid To Any Address Absolutely Free.

Carrara Paint Is Used on the Most Beautiful Homes of the Country.

The cost of painting is a heavy burden. Cheap paints soon fade, peel or scale off, and soon rot and all costs so much and has to be replaced so often that it is a constant expense to keep the house, clean appearance so desirable in the cozy cottage home or the elegant mansion.

The Waldorf-Astoria and many of the magnificent hotels in New York City are painted with the world-famous Carrara Paint, and this is also true of many of the famous clubs and public buildings of the great metropolis. Most all of the great railroad, palace car, telephone and electric companies use Carrara Paint in preference to any other, because they proved it best by test. Field Museum, Chicago, covering over seven acres of ground, is painted with Carrara Paint.

From railroad box car to elegantly furnished general offices of the great railway, from plain brick walls and stone fences to the roofs and interior finish of stately hotels, from country barn or hawsted or cheap outbuilding to farm residence, suburban home or luxurious city residence, Carrara is used because it lasts longer, does not fade, doesn't crack, blister or peel, and covers more surface than the highest priced paints. It costs less than the cheap mixed paints that mixers instead of painters. There is but one Carrara. It is made by the Carrara Paint Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, and anyone having a house to paint should send for 50 sample colors free, of this great paint that has stood the most rigid tests for 25 years, and bear in mind that it is the only paint ever manufactured that is backed by a positive guarantee in every case. Write to-day and save half your paint bills in the future, by filling in the coupon in your name and address as dotted lines below.

OUR OFFER.

Cut out this coupon now and mail it to the Carrara Paint Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Please send me FREE by return mail, prepaid, 50 Sample Colors and circulars, booklet showing many beautiful colorings, just as they are painted with this great paint.

Give full address—write plainly.

We absolutely prove to every property owner that Carrara Paint will cost less, look better and wear twice as long as any other paint.

LUCANIA WINS OVER LORRAINE IN OCEAN RACE

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Cunarder Lucania, which holds the transatlantic record of five days seven hours twenty-seven minutes from Queenstown, ended an exciting ocean race when she came in to-day ahead of La Lorraine of the French line. Both ships steamed out of their respective ports of Liverpool and Havre on Saturday last. The Lucania left Queenstown on Sunday morning.

Both vessels were in touch by wireless all the way over. The Cunarder was reported by wireless 3206 miles east of Sandy Hook at 5 a. m. yesterday. This is the same as 203 miles to the eastward of Nantucket lightship. La Lorraine was then ahead, for at 5:20 a. m. she was 3100 miles east of Nantucket lightship. They passed Nantucket lightship forty-five minutes apart. The Lucania then caught up with and passed her. The Lorraine's wireless heard from the liners was from Fire Island. The Lucania was southeast of Fire Island at 9:30 o'clock, and the Lorraine at 10:30 o'clock.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS STRIKE

RUTLAND, Vt., May 25.—Fifteen electrical workers employed by the Rutland Railroad Light and Power Company are on strike here for an increase in wages. General Manager David Fox declares that there will be no advance, and the men are still out holding out. The men are organizing a union.

N. H. HEALTH BOARD WARS ON IMPURE MILK

Special to the Boston American.

MANCHESTER, N. H., May 25.—The State Board of Health, influenced by a protest from the Massachusetts State Board, has interfered in small towns throughout the State to summarily stop the adulteration of milk and scanty feeding of cows. Large quantities of inferior or impure milk sent to the Bay State caused the protest.

John A. McAfee of Merrimac, was fined $25 and costs in the Superior Court yesterday for watering milk. John C. Gallagher paid the same fine for feeding his cattle brewery grain. Some time ago, when he was charged with adulterating his milk with formaldehyde, Mr. Gallagher told the editor of the chemical coming from brewery grain he fed to the cows. Investigation revealed the fact that the statutes forbid feeding such waste to cattle, and he pleaded guilty.

BITTEN BY HORSE, HAS BABIES

POWNAL, Vt., May 25.—J. M. Thompson has gone to the Pasteur Institute, in New York, to be treated for the rabies. One of his horses was bitten during the night by a mad dog, and Thompson was in turn bitten by the horse. All dogs in town have been muzzled.

$200,000,000 CHANGE HANDS IN WHEAT PANIC

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Two hundred million dollars have been won and lost in the last thirty days in the craze of wheat speculation. Board of Trade brokers declared to-day that these are conservative figures, although there is no way of actually computing the totals of losses and gains.

The market may turn, the history of the Leiter corner may be repeated, but whichever way the market goes or falls new figures have sprung up on the floor of Trade and new names have appeared in the pit, who are sure to be among the players of those who have gone down and have been thrown out in the most colossal wave of wheat speculation known in Chicago since the days of Leiter, Armour, Partridge and Hutchinson. So tremendous has been the fight among the bulls and the bears of the market that it is estimated that the entire wheat crop of the world has been sold and resold, bought and rebought a thousand times over on the floor of the Board of Trade in the last three weeks.

WENT FISHING, CAUGHT $100.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., May 25.—While fishing for trout at Ripton, George Fassett of this town landed a wallet containing $100 out of a brook.

CZAR DEFIED BY FINNISH PARLIAMENT

HELSINGFORS, Finland, May 25.—Defiance of the Czar has been declared by the new Finnish Diet in almost its first official act, and in the reply to the "address from the throne" the members have placed themselves on record as determined to uphold all Finland's privileges and not to truckle in any measure to the authorities at St. Petersburg.

A colorless address from the Czar, read in the formal opening of the Diet called forth the declaration from the members. Socialistic members advocated ignoring the Czar entirely and argued that no reply should be made to the address. When they were defeated on this point they refused to participate in drafting a reply.

TROUBLE FEARED IN SANTIAGO STRIKE

HAVANA, May 25.—Serious trouble is feared to-day at Santiago, following the fighting yesterday between striking dock workers and the police, and the authorities are apprehensive over the outlook, according to early advices to-day. It is feared the man wounded in the police volley yesterday will die.

Be on your guard against imitations of Fels-Naptha soap.

Taking out blood stains

is the severest test a soap can be put to.

You can scald or boil a blood-stained handkerchief, using any ordinary soap in the old-fashioned way and rub on the washboard until the skin's off your knuckles, without budging the blood stains.

But try Fels-Naptha soap in lukewarm or cold water according to the easy directions on wrapper and the blood dissolves like snow in April.

Isn't it common sense that a soap that will perform this miracle without injuring the most delicate fabric is also the best for all laundry and household purposes?

It's so easy—the Fels-Naptha way of washing. All the real hard work is done by the soap itself. Use lukewarm or cold water remember. With hot water and boiling or scalding, Fels-Naptha soap does not have the chance to show what a wonderful dirt loosener it is.

Fels-Naptha takes out grease spots and other stains just as readily as it does blood stains. Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper.

How Aunty Drudge Takes Out Blood Stains.

Johnny Jones—"Boo hoo! boo hoo! Thommie Thumps hit me on the nose and made it bleed and it's all over my nice new shirtwaist. Boo hoo!"

Anty Drudge—"Tommy Thumps is a very naughty boy—that is if you didn't hit him first. But never mind, Anty Drudge will rub a little Fels-Naptha soap on the blood spots and soak the shirtwaist in lukewarm water for 30 minutes, rub it lightly on the washboard, and presto! the blood stains are gone and the shirtwaist as good as new again."

Imitations of Fels-Naptha cost the same as the genuine and won't do the work.

ST. LOUIS, May 25.—Boston retaliated and shut out St. Louis yesterday, 4 to 0. Powell and Young, two former team mates, opposed each other and "Win Cy" pitched all around his younger adversary.

The notable plays were made by Wagner of the Boston Reds and Niles of the locals. Wagner, on what he has shown in his games here is good enough to perform on any major league team's diamond.

The Boston players feel very much encouraged over yesterday's victory, declaring that if they are good enough to whip Jack Powell they ought to experience no difficulty in defeating the locals in the remaining games of the series.

Harry Howell will not be here to take his turn against Boston, having been called to Brooklyn, his home town, by an urgent message from his sister. The reason for the rush is not known. So, with Howell absent, McAleer will be compelled to use either Jacobson or Morgan, and that tickles the boys from the Hub. Glade as yet has not faced the Bostonites but McAleer is holding Fred in reserve for Sunday's game.

Harris will do the pitching for Manager Unglaub's nine to-day and Criger will catch.

An afternoon paper printed an exclusive story to the effect that Collins was to be benched for indifferent playing, but from what is seen here Jim is trying just as hard for Unglaub as he did when he was in charge of the gang. He holds so gracefully that it may appear to some that he is loafing.

When Unglaub was asked as to the truth of the story he merely said: "Of course there's nothing in it. Jim ain't that kind of a fellow."

Collins just smiled and said: "Oh that's just a story to fill up space. Bob knows better than that and isn't worrying about getting a man for my position."

SMALL CROWD ATTENDS RACES ON SPEEDWAY

It was the smallest crowd of the season that greeted the matinee drivers at Charles River speedway, due likely to the cold, raw weather, barring given devotees of the equine all they desired for the week, though the threatening weather no doubt deterred many from making the trip.

Al. Furbush was compelled to go against the watch with Chief White, as there are no pacers in the Metropolitan Driving Club capable of giving the champion a race. He managed to beat 1:03½, his best winning performance of the year, and quite handily stepped the course in 1:02¾.

There was absolutely nothing to the fast trot, Mac Pluff heading the summary list just as he liked. Arlita, Vesper and Kathia put up a very good race, but the first named had apparently some reserve left each heat at the finish. Major looked to be giving Al. Ray all he could attend to the latter part of the second heat, but both were tired horses.

F. O. Gould pulled off a nice victory with La Gazelle after Billy Goss had copped the opening heat. Fred Purbush did the same in his event with Conundrum, as M. A. Nevins appeared the best of the pacey when he captured the first heat with Alcy M. Following are the names of the winners and best time made in each race:

Class A, trotting: Tom Flair (Isaac Sexton, 2:06). Class B, trotting: Arlita (C. C. Mayberry, 1:13½). Class C, pacing: Goliath (W. J. Furbush, 1:07. Class D, pacing: Al. Ray (A. J. Furbush, 1:06½). Class E, pacing: Pacing Purbush (J. Eddy, 1:12). Class F, trotting: La Gazelle (F. O. Gould, 1:09½). Class G, trotting: Mac Lee (C. G. Newcomb, 1:12. Class H, pacing: The Governess (A. J. Furbush, 1:12). Class I, pacing: Conundrum (W. J. Furbush, 1:10½).

CRIMSON TO MEET TIGERS

Special to the Boston American.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 25.—Harvard and Princeton meet in the second game of their baseball series here this afternoon. The Tigers won the first game at Cambridge by a score of 1 to 0. The Crimson players are confident that they will turn the tables on the local collegians, which would make a third game necessary.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Determined to continue their good work of yesterday against the Giants, and follow it up with another victory, the Boston team will appear this afternoon before a crowd which it is expected will reach larger proportions than any assemblage before which they have played this season.

Gus Dorner, the ex-Red, is slated by Manager Tenney to do the finding for the visiting aggregation, while "Dummy" Taylor is slated to do the twirling for McGraw's men.

Much talk has been created by the suspension of Roger Bresnahan, who is regarded the greatest catcher in the country, as they get when the Cubs beat them two out of three.

But Flaherty, the ex-Pirate, was on the rubber for the Brooklyns, and was the star of the game. In the second inning, with the bases full, he smashed his ball for a home run, which netted four runs and practically clinched a victory for the Highlites.

The Bostons batted and fielded well. The Giants had to use four pitchers, Wiltse, Ames, Taylor and McGinnity. Neither of them was able to keep the visitors from clouting the ball.

N. E. Intercollegiate Championships Today

DARTMOUTH TEAM EXPECTED TO WIN

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, May 25.—The Hub of the Commonwealth is certainly a college city to-day as every train reaching the city brings hundreds of the effervescent college man who has come for the express purpose of cheering on his colors at the annual New England Intercollegiate track championships at Worcester Oval.

The annual games this year promise to excel any previous meeting of the association and before the day of sport is over some of the keenest competition ever seen in college athletics is sure to materialize.

Yesterday the trials in many of the events were run off, which left the cream of the material to compete in the finals this afternoon, and all the competitors are keyed up to the highest point of their ability to put their college to the front.

The eleven colleges representing the association have all made entries and some of the smaller institutions will pick up odd points, but the real race is between Dartmouth, Williams, Brown and Amherst, and the final standing will probably find them like that order.

Dartmouth Team Formidable.

The Dartmouth team under the direction of Coach Bowler is a most formidable one and the men are even surprising their capable director, as he asserted that the men were in not much better shape when Dartmouth met Harvard and was swamped in a dual meet.

The New Hampshire college has the greatest number of men left from the trials who qualified for the finals with Amherst and Williams next in line and if the representatives fulfil what is expected of them the championship will go to the green for a second time.

The most sensational feature of the trials yesterday was the performance of Shaw, the Dartmouth hurdler, who negotiated the 120-yard hurdles in fifteen seconds flat, which means a world's record, but one of the last hurdles fell more on its own account than any fault of Shaw's. The fatality lost Shaw a chance to claim the record but the New England Association will accept it to supercede that made by Steve Chase of Dartmouth back in '96 when he covered the ground in 15 3-5 seconds. Shaw has equalled the world's mark before this season and it was no great surprise that he did some grand work. He is conceded first place in the high hurdles and he may secure victory in the 220-yard event. He will be pressed to the tape by Hubbard of Amherst and Mayhew of Brown.

One of the upsets was the winning of first in the trials in the shot put by Merrill of Bowdoin, who beat out Marshall of Williams, who won last year. Marshall was several feet off his last year's form and may do better to-day.

Considering the condition of the track which was in the ideal shape for the runners the time was not so fast in any of the events with the exception of the high hurdles as would have been expected.

Some Records May Go.

With the big grandstand filled this afternoon and the alumni and students yelling themselves hoarse the athletes may get a move on and smash some records.

A big crowd is looked for from Boston as a special rate to Worcester has been made for the occasion. The summaries:

440-yard dash—First heat won by Pond, Brown; second, St. Anno, Maine; third, Haron, Wesleran; fourth, Grant, Williams. Time, 51 4-5s. Second heat won by Pritchard, Dartmouth; second, Smart, Amherst; third, Chase, Brown; fourth, Wyman, Maine. Time, 52 2-5s.

ATTELL SHOULD HAVE PUT SOLOMON OUT EASILY

Special to the Boston American.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 25.—Abe Attell got the decision over Kid Solomon at the end of the twentieth round. A lot of people in this town go to Attell's fights in the hope of seeing him well licked. From all the present indications they will continue to hope.

The featherweight champion added one more trophy to the growing collection and Bennie Solomon received a lacing that will keep his friends quiet for a while at least.

Before the sixth round he was staggering from weakness and had Attell been blind or disinterested a determined onslaught he might have put his antagonist away any time after the eighth. Attell claimed that he hurt his hands on Solomon's head and did not dare to go in and finish the fight, and a referee would have been merciful.

From the fifteenth on to the end it was merely murder, deliberate, cold-blooded, grinning murder. Attell had his man on Queer street all the time, jabbing and slashing and cutting away with clean leads and counters, and Solomon could not have hit Abe with a barge pole. It was a poor fight, and Attell should have won it by the knockout route.

Saturday Warning.

The warning had the desired effect and the slaughter of Italian quails with Solomon wabbling around the ring, bleeding copiously and trying to cover his face from the rain of rights and lefts which he waded through. Attell was all over him.

Loser Almost Lands.

In the fifteenth round Solomon started something which he could not stop. He almost got Attell clear across the ring and almost hit him with a left swing. This woke Abe up and he wadded across the ring after Benny, cutting loose with both hands. For over a minute he pounded Solomon unmercifully, making the blood fly in streams and at the end of the round Solomon's hands were down and he was defenseless. It was the cruelest round of the whole fight, and a referee would have been merciful.

From the fifteenth on to the end it was merely murder, deliberate, cold-blooded, grinning murder. Attell had his man on Queer street all the time, jabbing and slashing and cutting away with clean leads and counters, and Solomon could not have hit Abe with a barge pole. It was a poor fight, and Attell should have won it by the knockout route.

Solomon Like a Novice.

From the first tap of the gong Solomon was a child in Attell's hands, and though he had the advantage of height and reach, Abe walked over him, using punches on the body and inventing a few more as he went along. And when he brought out a new one Solomon howled foul.

Benny showed the yellow. The display of cowardice came in the seventh round. Solomon, wearying of the role of a human punching bag, tried to get into close quarters and work on his adversary's pocket. Abraham met him at this style of battle, and for a minute, began to swing away with both hands, shooting victous uppercuts to the chin and varying the monotony with hard short-arm jolts to the stomach. Solomon, seeing that he was up against a man who could beat him at any kind of a fight, began to rush and poke deliberate lefts into foul territory. Eyton warned him against trying to lose the fight on a foul.

The warning had the desired effect and the slaughter of Italian quails with Solomon wabbling around the ring, bleeding copiously and trying to cover his face from the rain of rights and lefts which he waded through. Attell was all over him.

NAPS CRIPPLED BY OPERATION ON LEIBHARDT

Special to the Boston American.

CLEVELAND, May 25.—Leibhardt, "the iron man of the South," was operated upon last night at the Huron Road Hospital for tonsilitis, and will be out of the game two weeks. He and Joss have been Cleveland's mainstays in the box this year, and the youngster's absence will be a serious handicap to the team. He will not be able to accompany the Naps on their Eastern trip, which means that Manger Lajoie will be forced to work some of the pitchers that have not rounded to form. Leibhardt's indisposition is the result of working in cold weather. Whenever a raw day came along he was sent into pitch and the other twirlers were saved.

If Men Wore Their Coat Tails in Front

What Would You Women Say?

By persistent patience we hope to make women realise that it is foolish to spend their money on changing fashions — especially when these fashions spoil their good looks.

This year, for instance, every woman who can afford it is prancing around with a hat turned hind-side before.

Last year every woman had a hat sticking far out in front, with a little bobtailed back to it.

And this year they have all got their hats sticking far out BEHIND, with a little bobtailed FRONT. And they are as happy as if they discovered the law of gravitation or squared the circle or the butcher's bill.

If you ask them WHY they wear their hats as they do this year they will tell you that it is because they wore them the other way LAST year.

Now, why will you women not be sensible? You want to be considered men's equals, and you are the equals of men, and their superiors in almost everything except common sense about clothes.

What would you say to a man if he came to your tea party with his coat tails fastened to the front of his coat? Wouldn't you think him ridiculous? Wouldn't you call him absolutely foolish if he explained his costume by telling you that he wore his coat tails in the rear last year and changed them around to the front this year for the sake of variety?

If he did this to please himself, it would be foolish enough. But if you learned that he allowed himself to be fixed up in this ridiculous fashion because his tailor invented the scheme to make more money out of him and compel him to throw away the old coat, you would think him not only foolish, but almost idiotic.

You would say, "For goodness sake, go home, cut off those coat tails and sew them on where they belong."

That is exactly what men feel inclined to say to you women when you waste your time and your money and your energy with your foolish, senseless fashions.

Of course, for the few that are rich and idle it doesn't matter.

It is perhaps better for them to be thinking about a hat than about something more harmful.

Unfortunately, however, the amusement of the idle rich often means worry, sorrow and disappointment for young girls who cannot dress as fashion demands.

Only the other day a poor young girl threw herself into the river. She was driven to suicide by despair because she could not dress well enough—as she thought—to look attractive. Nobody knows the pathetic effort that poor girls make to seem fashionable, and all because of a bad example. When the short sleeves—which are ugly and not modest—came into fashion, poor girls began tucking up or cutting off the old sleeves.

When a girl, by saving, has got money to buy a good warm coat, some idiotic fashion comes along to change the sleeves or tails, or front and makes her almost ashamed to wear it.

Women, can't you realize that the important things about you are your face, your common sense, your figure, your hands, your feet, your waist—AS NATURE MADE THEM?

Don't you know that you ought to use your talents in decorating very simply the beautiful work of Nature? Don't you suppose that the hundreds of thousands of years that Nature has spent in developing you must give a better result that ten or fifteen minutes' foolish thinking by a foolish hat maker, and corset maker? Be sensible; stop your nonsense!

Your Teeth: Hard to Get, to Keep, to Lose;

But Worth All the Trouble They Can Possibly Give You

HEALTH DEPENDS UPON THE TEETH.

It has been said that teeth are hard to get, hard to keep, and hard —that is to say, mighty painful— to lose.

This is true. But intelligent care will make the coming of the teeth in babyhood easier. It makes keeping teeth quite a simple matter. AND IT MAKES LOSING THEM UNNECESSARY.

Many a child has had all sorts of lessons, all sorts of advantages, EXCEPT TEETH PROPERLY CARED FOR.

And of those children it may truly be said later in life that they might well have exchanged nearly all of their early care for

A good tooth brush.
A good tooth powder.
A good tooth wash.

Those three things, REGULARLY AND INTELLIGENTLY USED, mean more to human health than almost anything else except the proper use of well-cared-for teeth IN CAREFUL, SLOW CHEWING.

A Purchased Press

By Rabbi Charles Fleischer

MRS. SHELLEY, wife of the poet, tells a fanciful story of the manufacture of a man, fearfully created named Frankenstein. This creature turns upon his creators and becomes a constant menace and terror.

In our country we have created an institution which has similar sinister possibilities. That is the Press. For good or for ill, it is the most powerful institution in the land.

The real ruler of America is public opinion. The most potent agency for making and expressing public opinion is the Press.

Obviously, it is of the highest importance to our democracy that the Press be honest and pure, high-purposed and, above all, unpurchasable.

Many men and many minds make a Press of varying calibre and differing opinions quite a matter of course. Indeed, there is more danger in the agreements than in the disagreements of our papers and magazines.

A case in point is the recent campaign for the Shoe Machinery Bill, which developed a startling unanimity of opinion, that—to put it mildly—looked rather suspicious.

A little investigation indicates that about thirty of the newspapers of our Commonwealth printed, at critical times during this campaign, the same or similar matter highly favorable to the United Shoe Machinery Company and against the proposed legislation.

It is not absolutely impossible that this unanimity is what the psychologists might call an elaborate instance of "unconscious cerebration." But to the lay mind it looks as though there were a colored gentleman rather close to the woodshed.

The particularly pernicious, though by no means unique, feature of this incident is the printing of clearly "inspired" opinion as news matter. That it was favorable to the company in question and opposed to the bill makes no difference. The situation would be just as ugly if the conditions were reversed.

One of the greatest possible dangers to America lies in a venal, purchased Press. It is more of a menace even than corruptible legislators and officials. These come and go, but the Press we have always with us.

A paper whose editorial department is purchasable is contemptible enough. But one whose news columns can be bought or influenced is even worse. However respectable such a paper may be in outward seeming, the selling of its news space proves it rotten at the core.

For an editorial utterance the newspaper may be held directly responsible. A signed contribution makes the writer liable for his opinion. So also an advertiser stands behind his advertisement, if his name appears with it.

But a paid advertisement which does not frankly indicate its character in some way, but masquerades as a news or reading matter, is plainly a fraud and deserves to be punished as such.

The papers which print advertising matter in such a guise, and especially the kind designed to influence public opinion and the votes of legislators or officials, ought to be ruled out by a law planned to prevent this evil.

But they should be punished in company with the advertiser who purposely perpetrates this fraud.

A venal Press is not possible without venal business men and politicians. The question in this matter is one all around, in order that our public prints may be kept free, honest and reliable.

Advertisers, with the offer of their money, threaten to withdraw it, hold a power over our papers and magazines which endangers their freedom. Even one man gets a squeeze, the people are distinctly at the mercy of the corrupt or self-centred advertiser.

This Shoe Machinery incident is decidedly significant. It should be a means of stirring the moral sense of the community to a realization of an influence which menaces the power of the press for good and tends to weaken its capacity for service of the people as a free and reliable agent in forming and expressing public opinion.

RAISING $1,500,000 TO START A CLASS WAR

Mr. Cox of the Governor's Council Is on the Committee

Mr. Cox is a member of the Governor's Council. He lives in Malden, where he is a part owner of the Malden Evening News, of which Representative Bayrd is the editor.

This newspaper, in which Mr. Bayrd, Mr. Cox and State Auditor Henry E. Turner are joint owners, printed editorial matter in the interest of the United Shoe Machinery Company, which was paid for at so much a line by the trust.

It published this matter while the bill in which the trust was so heavily interested was pending in the Legislature, and when Mr. Bayrd was about to vote upon the measure.

So, you see, Mr. Cox is in good company. In fact, Mr. Cox all his life has associated only with highly respectable people. Senator Lodge, for instance, is one of his close personal friends; in fact, Senator Lodge is Mr. Cox's political sponsor.

With the aid of Senator Lodge, Mr. Cox has frequently triumphed over his political enemies, and with that aid he is now a member of the Governor's Council.

As further evidence of Mr. Cox's eminent respectability we might notice the fact that he is also an intimate friend and admirer of Eben S. Draper, Lieutenant-Governor and proprietor of the non-union town of Hopedale. At a dinner given to Mr. Cox by the Republican District Committee last Summer, Mr. Cox, who was the principal speaker of the evening, lauded the work of Lieutenant-Governor Draper at the State House, and said with pride that the time was not far off when Mr. Draper would fill the Governor's chair.

We have no doubt, also, that Mr. Cox is very friendly with Representative Turtle, who succeeded in having all the labor measures that had been introduced at this session of the Legislature sidetracked, and who thereby saved himself and the other members of the Legislature from having to go on record on these bills.

In all probability, too, Mr. Cox is a personal friend of John N. Cole, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and publisher of a newspaper which makes most of its profit by doing printing for the United Shoe Machinery Company.

We don't know how friendly Mr. Cox may be with Governor Guild, but inasmuch as he is a warm friend of practically every member of the Republican State machine, for which he has, in fact, for several years raised large campaign funds, we assume that Mr. Cox is a good friend of the Governor in whose council he sits.

The friends and admirers of Mr. Cox are not limited to Massachusetts. In spite of his numerous political duties he finds time to take an active part in the affairs of the National Association of Manufacturers, which has been holding a convention in New York this week. This association of manufacturers purposes to raise a fund of $1,500,000 with which to wage a war on labor unions.

The president of the association showed his respect for Mr. Cox's ability by appointing him a member of the committee which is charged with the duty of raising this million and a half dollars which the association expects to spend in the next three years. In the speech calling for the raising of this enormous fund the president of the association declared that fully a half-million dollars a year was needed for the next three years to fight organized labor, which he characterized as "our greatest menace."

This is Mr. Cox, a member of the Governor's Council in Massachusetts and close friend of all the heads of the Republican party.

Mr. Cox's experience in raising Republican campaign funds will undoubtedly be of great assistance to him in helping to raise the million and a half dollars with which the National Association of Manufacturers purposes to begin a CLASS WAR directed against organized labor.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—As one of the papers not printing advertising for the Shoe Machinery Trust, we want to congratulate you on the stand taken in this particular matter. Oftentimes the Herald does not agree with the AMERICAN'S policy, but of course that need not worry the AMERICAN to any great extent. That, however, is neither here nor there. We have up here one of those "holier than thou" sort of newspapers, the Transcript, and we are glad to see an outside paper class them where they belong in a matter of this kind. We enclose their "defence" for using this advertising matter in their news columns. Yours truly, HAGGERTY BROTHERS.

ADVOCATES A STREET RAILWAY MEN'S UNION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have read the articles sent in by motormen which tell of their many troubles. They speak about their hours of labor, the pay they get, and one thing or another. The question is to say that every man should be a free man, and to be a free man he must belong to a union. We can plainly see where the free man is. If he motormen and conductors and, in fact all the employees of the Boston Elevated were organized, they would soon have things set right. As it is now, there is no head or tail to the way their work is handled. Each man is looking out for himself. First one man gets a squeeze, then the next fellow gets the same. When one gets it the other don't feel it. If they were organized, then when one man got a squeeze they would all feel it, and instead of taking it like a lemon they could fight it as a body. They will never get treated right until they join the ranks of organized labor.

A UNION MAN.

EXPOSES SPY METHODS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wish to congratulate your paper for the fearless way you have published and exposed the methods adopted by the United Shoe Machinery Company, also the way you have shown up the press.

In one Lynn paper there appeared an article stating that no money was being paid out by the United Company, and on the next page was the paid advertisement. The first article referred to was written by the regular staff correspondent at the State House.

The company, instead of adopting an honorable course of education and stating that they were paying for the space, took this spy system in underhanded way the same as their henchmen have done in the past orders about this city. This worked to their injury rather than to their help. Honesty is the best policy."

ANOTHER DEFENDER

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

You omitted the most important paper out of the list of those who allowed the United Shoe Machinery Company to use their columns at so much per line, viz.: the Lawrence Telegram, formerly owned by Speaker Dodd and disposed of by him recently. Whether he retains an interest in the concern or not I cannot say.
